"HOME OPTION" LIQUOR ANSWER---WOODCOCK; SURVEY SHOWS GEORGIA IS PRACTICALLY DRY

ATLANTA AS DRY AS ANY BIG CITY; POLICE PRAISED

IMPROVEMENT SEEN IN ALL SECTIONS

Baker, Berien, Bleckley, Crawford, Twiggs, Quitman and Upson Counties Declared Hostile.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—A prohibition survey of Georgia has convinced Frank Buckley, prohibition bureau attorney, that the state is "dry in sentiment," and that the "combined efforts of both federal and state organizations have practically eliminated major violations in the state."

The report was made public today with submission to the senate by the Wickersham commission of testimony on which it based its recent prohibition report.

Buckley said the prohibition problem in the state was confined largely to homemade liquors, commenting "Very little demand exists for foreign liquors."

He reported that the mountainous section of northern Georgia "has been a moonshine center from time immemorial. Fayette, Clayton, Campbell and Spalding counties south of Atlanta were described as distilling centers, most of the violators being negroes set up in business by whites.

Buckley said Atlanta presented the average "big city liquor problem," but that co-operation between state and federal officials had substantially lessened violations. Atlanta police, he said, co-operate fully with federal agencies.

Prohibition enforcement conditions, Buckley said, were satisfactory in all but seven of the 70 counties comprising the middle district. These counties he named as Baker, Berrien, Bleckley, Crawford, Twiggs, Quitman and Upson.

"Unfavorable conditions," he said, "apparently revolve about the sheriffs therein, all of whom are unsympathetic, refuse to co-operate and are regarded generally by prohibition authorities as hostile."

He paid tribute to conditions in Macon, but said that in Savannah "local and county police are not as active against violators as they are in other municipalities."

Five of the 45 counties in the southern district, Buckley said, were centers of distilling. He named them as Bryan, Emanuel, Evans, Tattnall, and Toombs. Their sheriffs, he added, were "unsympathetic with enforcement efforts and extend no co-operation to federal officers."

Buckley said much of the liquor made in the section named found a market in Savannah.

ALABAMA PROGRESSING UNDER PROHIBITION

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—From the report made public today with submission to the senate by the Wickersham commission of testimony on which it based its recent prohibition report it was learned that conditions in Alabama are "improving and Alabama is progressing under prohibition."

Rev. John S. Goode Dies in Carnesville

CARNESVILLE, Ga., Feb. 20.—The Rev. John S. Goode, 80 years of age, father of State Senator George L. Goode, died at his home here at 6 o'clock Friday evening after a long illness.

The Rev. Mr. Goode was one of this section's most prominent Baptist ministers, and retired last July because of ill health after 58 years of active church work.

He was the author of the history of the Tugaloo Baptist association.

Funeral services will be conducted from the Carnesville Baptist church at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Dr. A. P. Cline will officiate and interment will be in the church cemetery.

Besides Senator Goode, another son, J. M. Goode, of College Park, survives.

Only Canine Ph.D. Killed in Carolina

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Feb. 20. "Dixie," the only dog in the world with a bona fide Ph. D. degree, is dead. The female terrier was killed by an automobile.

Besides being the holder of an honorary degree of doctor of philosophy conferred in 1926 by Dr. Edwin Greenlaw, of the University of North Carolina, Dixie was a member of the Carolina Playmakers, the Actors' Equity Association of America, and the Carolina Dramatic Association.

She had been famous at the university since she became a member of Prof. F. H. Koch's family eight years ago.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Only a flimsy senate barrier stood tonight between Muscle Shoals legislation and the White House.

Sped to the senate by a vote of 216 to 153, its advocates looked confidently to adoption of the measure there. A similar measure has been approved by the senate in the past.

The democratic house minority was joined by 87 republicans and Representative Kvale, farmer-labor, Minnesota, in favor of the report. Three democrats opposed it. They were Representatives Douglas, Arizona; and Linthicum and Palmisano, of Maryland.

For the second time in ten years a president must rule on government or private operation of the $150,000,000 project on the Tennessee river in Alabama. Two years ago a similar bill was given a pocket veto by President Coolidge. The same course is open to Hoover.

The bill now approaching the chief executive sets up a corporation to operate the power plant at Wilson dam, construct the Cove creek dam in Tennessee and build transmission lines to carry any surplus power to purchasers. State and local governments have the first right to surplus power.

The president is given wide powers to negotiate a lease for the nitrate plants. The lessee would be sold power on the condition that not less than 85 per cent be used in producing fertilizer. Other products could be man-

TWO MEN INDICTED IN FORGERY PROBE

19 Bills Returned Against Alleged Leaders; Victims Lose Thousands.

Evidence tending to show that Atlanta business and professional men friendly to organized labor have been bilked out of thousands of dollars by a ring of expert forgers in the last several months is in the hands of the prosecuting staff, Solicitor-General John A. Boykin said Friday after the count, grand jury had returned 19 indictments against the two alleged leaders of the ring.

The two men indicted Friday, C. E. Rylee and E. V. Renney, were ordered held under bond of $11,000 each. They are the fifth and sixth men indicted, four men having been arrested previously and are being held in the Fulton tower in default of bond.

The 19 bills voted by the grand jury at a long session Friday followed the appearance of a number of prominent business and professional men to testify against Rylee and Renney.

A member of Mr. Boykin's staff de-

Member of King Zog's Staff Killed As Assassins' Bullets Go Wild

VIENNA, Feb. 20.—(AP)—King Zog of Albania, one of the most closely guarded monarchs of Europe and whose life has been plotted against many times, was fired at tonight by would-be assassins but escaped without injury.

The king was leaving the Vienna opera house, surrounded by his staff, when two Albanians fired several shots into the group. The bullets missed the king but his adjutant, Major Topolai, fell dead and a court official, M. Lipozova, was wounded in the leg. One report was that King Zog owed his life to Major Topolai, who saw the assasins and dashed in front of his royal master.

The king, himself, helped police and his chauffeur to seize his assailants. Their names were given as Asiz Cami and Tielezzi. They were said to belong to the opposition party in Albania.

This was not the first time that Zog had narrowly escaped death. In 1924, when he was premier of Albania, a student shot at him in Tirana, slightly wounding him.

Zog was proclaimed king by the national assembly of Albania in 1928 and won himself the title of "the hardest working monarch in Europe."

Mountaineers of his country declared a blood feud against him and at times he was virtually a prisoner in his palace because of the fear that he might be assassinated were he to appear in public. On one occasion 11 men who plotted against him were reported executed. It was said that his old mother prepared his food to prevent the possibility of its being poisoned.

For more than a year there have been constant rumors that he was gravely ill, if not actually dying, but specialists whom he came to visit in Austria recently diagnosed nothing more serious than disorders from oversmoking. The king arrived in Vienna on January 28 and went under the care of specialists.

Modern Technical Devices Can't Replace Newspapers, Says Northwestern Professor at Press Institute in Athens

A group of delegates to the annual Georgia Press Institute are pictured above in front of the School of Journalism building on the University of Georgia campus in Athens, where sessions of the conference are being held. The institute will end today.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 20.—(AP)—The newspaper will continue to hold its place in the affections and the interest of the people "as long as babies are born into the world, and women given in marriage and men carry on the job of making a living," the Georgia Press Institute was told today.

Dr. Harry Franklin Harrington, director of the School of Journalism at Northwestern University, told the institute modern technical devices would never duplicate the peculiarly intimate service of the newspaper. "Into the ink and the paper there moves a mysterious presence, fashioned of heart and mind and spirit, that gives a paper that intimate human quality so richly prized, so frequently absent in other products," he said.

The opportunity of the newspaper to influence social and economic reform, also was discussed by Dr. Harrington and by Dr. Harley L. Lutz, professor of public finance at Princeton University. Dr. Lutz recently surveyed Georgia's financial situation and found it in need of reform. He told the assembled editors here that "if the newspapers of this state were to act as a unit in demanding any given financial reform, that reform could be secured." In his report on the state finances and in his speech here, he said Georgia "must eventually plan for a thorough reorganization of your scheme of local government if you are to realize the maximum advantages from any plan of saving money for taxpayers."

Sherwood Anderson, novelist and publisher of Marion, Va., discussed economic and social conditions in the south. He said efforts already are being made to invent a machine to pick cotton and with industry moving south the section faced great problems.

He said there is a group in the south working against industrialization and centralization, against "modern methods of doing things. If this group succeeds we will have another age of aristocracy, with the majority of the southern people serving as brute laborers." He predicted that the group would not succeed, however, and said the country is entering an age when men of money would not be considered as the only leaders, but that men of moderate means, with education, will be considered on a par with them.

"Man will either conquer the machines or the machines will conquer man," he said. "The best solution seen in conquering the machine is to decrease working hours, do away with child labor, stop women working in factories at night and to make the machine work for all, not just for the wealthy or influential."

James F. Nevin, editor of the Atlanta Georgian, discussing the press and higher education, stressed the obligations devolving upon the press to support education.

Miss Jane Judge, literary editor of the Savannah Morning News, spoke on "Women's Interest in the Newspaper." She presented her subject from two main viewpoints—the interest which women as readers have in the newspaper, and the way their interests and their point of view are expressed through the newspaper. She raised the question whether women really have a specialized interest in the newspaper, different from the interest of men, and gave illustrations to show the way in which these interests overlap, and sometimes are even transposed.

The visitors to the institute were entertained at luncheon by the Atlanta Journal, with John Paschall, managing editor of The Journal, presiding. A round-table conference was held in the afternoon, with discussions of various phases of newspaper work by Georgia editors.

In his address Dr. Lutz today told the institute that the future of the state's financial well-being rests with the press of Georgia.

"If the newspapers of this state were to act as a unit in demanding any given financial reform," Dr. Lutz said, "that reform could be secured.

"I need not say that this fact, which

W. & A. BILL NEARS DEBATE IN SENATE

Battle-Allen Measure Expected To Reach Floor Tuesday Morning.

BY R. E. POWELL.

While the house continued Friday to debate provisions of the income tax bill, the senate, for the second time since it received the railroad rental discount bill, suspended its rules and moved the Battle-Allen bill into a parliamentary situation where floor consideration may be begun Tuesday morning.

Both the house and the senate, after facetious discussion in the former and serious argument in the latter, adopted a joint resolution which carried the seventh week-end adjournment over for three days. Sessions marking the beginning of the eighth week will get under way Tuesday at 11 o'clock.

State Auditor Tom Wisdom, at the request of members, Friday furnished the senate with figures showing the relative amounts which would be received by the schools and hospitals under the rental discount bill passed in the house, 146 to 50, and under the bill as amended in the senate finance committee Wednesday afternoon.

An analysis of the two bills, made on the basis of a yield of $3,400,000 for 10 years' discount, shows that the increase of $366,180 to the common schools, as contemplated by the Goode senate committee amendment, would be taken from the pensioners and the hospitals.

Amos 'n' Andy Divided for First Time In Dixie's Cornpone-Potlikker Etiquette

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.

Atlanta Constitution:

We are divided over cornpone and potlikker debate. Amos will take cornpone any way he can get it as long as he can have potlikker with it. Andy will take potlikker provided he can get cornpone. Andy will eat it either crumbled in potlikker or potlikker with cornpone crumbled in it. That almost leaves Governor Long out. Madame Queen refuses to answer and referred us to her attorney, M. Smith. He was born in Hoboken and doesn't know what potlikker or cornpone is. Ruby Taylor sticks with Amos. We asked Kingfish how he liked his potlikker and he said "with gin'erale."

Love and kisses to The Constitution and Governor Long.

AMOS 'N' ANDY.

Crumble?—Sho! Sho!—Andy; Amos Takes His Any Old Way

When Governor Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, unwittingly made the remark about dunking cornpone, he had little idea, perhaps, that it would provide the spark which would set the nation's epicures aflame. Certainly Governor Long did not know that such an expression would divide the country's greatest pair of entertainers.

But it has happened. Amos 'n' Andy at last have become unalterably divided. And the least expected has occurred—Amos has come out with the eager admission that he "will take cornpone any way I can get it as long as I can have potlikker with it." And gruff old Andy, although far, far away from the cornpone-potlikker line, stands staunchly with the true crumblers of the solid south.

Andy will eat potlikker either with cornpone crumbled into it or the liquid poured over the crumbled pone.

The famous entertainers forgot about Andy's breach of promise suit and its incidental tribulations and started a discussion of the most famous topic since "Fifty-four-forty or Fight!" rang through the United States.

Madame Queen, not on speaking terms with Andy, flatly refused to be quoted. She referred interrogators to her lawyer, M. Smith, but M. Smith, having been born and reared in Hoboken, could not be considered an authority on this important question. Amos went around to the Kingfish and asked him.

"Well, lemme ast you somepin, Kingfish," Amos said in that plaintive way of his. "Do you eat yo' potlikker wid de dunkin' system or do you crumple it up."

"Well, boys," he announced. "I'll tell you. I prefers my potlikker wid jes' a little dab ob gin'erale."

Mayor Waits "Without."

Mayor Jimmy Walker, of New York, anxiously awaiting his first taste of Georgia potlikker and cornpone, was disappointed Friday when he learned that the first air mail contact he could make with Atlanta would be Monday. The debonair New York mayor had crassly expressed an ignorance of either of the two delicacies and the Cornpone and Potlikker Editor went out Friday and purchased a big vacuum bottle, made arrangements with Willie Daniels, noted Atlanta colored cook and caterer, to prepare a crumbly cornpone and with a local concern to concoct some genuine potlikker of turnip greens.

But due to the fact that any potlikker, even in a thermos bottle, sent to New York from Atlanta Saturday would reach the eastern city Sunday, the Potlikker Editor judiciously decided to wait until Sunday afternoon, in order that Mayor Walker's potlikker would be nice and hot when it reached him at city hall in New York Monday.

NORTH AVE. PRESBYTERIAN STRONG FOR CRUMBLING

North Avenue Presbyterian school, noted alike for its pulchritude and curriculum, came out in no uncertain terms against the heretic practice of dunking. A census taken by the reportorial staff of the institution showed that 107 students and members of the faculty are outright crumblers, while only 35 are guilty of dunking.

Scintillating comment on the situation ran something like this during the census:

Katherine MacMillan, editor of Napsonian: Crumbling by all means. The traditions of the south must be upheld!

Miss Thyrza S. Askew, principal: I stand by the customs of the south—I crumble.

Miss Ethel Pharr, English department: Having been denied dessert in my youth for the practice of dunking, then called sopping, I heartily indorse crumbling.

Sigmund Vitner "shot it out" with four bandits who tried to rob him in his grocery at 290 Houston street Friday night and not only saved approximately $100 in his cash drawer but also believes he seriously wounded one of the bandits.

Four bandits drove up to Vitner's store, two of them entering. As they approached Vitner told his wife he expected trouble. One of the two men directed Vitner to put up his hands but instead the grocer reached for his gun beneath a counter and came up firing.

One of the bandits, wearing a leather coat, fell to the floor. His companion rushed to his side and dragged him through the door into a big wine-colored sedan where their accomplices were waiting, the wounded bandit's companion returning the fire on Vitner as he fled. One of the bandit bullets grazed the grocer's shoulder.

Vitner and his wife gave the police a full description of the bandits and the license number of the car. Detectives assigned to the case immediately began to check the hospitals and physicians' offices but were unable to find a clue to the supposedly wounded bandit.

Bank Pays $140,000 To Recover $822,000

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Stolen bonds, valued at approximately $822,000, were returned to the Grand National bank here today upon payment of $140,000 for their return, Ed Mays, president of the bank, announced here today.

The money was paid to the Fidelity and Deposit Company, of Maryland, Mays said, for use in getting back the securities, stolen in the robbery of the bank's safety deposit vaults last May, while the vault door was being moved to a new location.

Father Kills Son in Brutal Drama Paralleling Grotesque Polish Play

WARSAW, Poland, Feb. 20.—(AP) Brutal truth in the remote village of Zagajniki has proved stranger than the fiction which was laughed away as preposterous when Henry Rostworowski, Polish dramatist, wrote it as a play.

Andrew Cygan, so this real life drama goes, came home to that little town after 18 years of hard work and thrifty living in America. Late one night, according to the story the villagers tell, he knocked at the door of the cottage where his aged parents lived.

His mother let him in but the only light in the single room came from a fire on the hearth. It was too faint for the old eyes of his parents to recognize their son. He decided to pose as a stranger.

Late into the night he sat with the old folks beside the fire and told them of the wonders of the new world, showing them a wallet bulging with money.

A look of grim understanding passed between the old man and his wife and Louis Cygan, seizing an ax, brought it down on the stranger's skull. Then they looked at identification papers in the dead man's wallet.

The next morning neighbors found them moaning over the body of their son. The mother was insane.

Ousted Preacher Sells Apples on Street

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(AP)—The Rev. Eliot White, dismissed from the staff of the Grace Protestant Episcopal church because of his defense of the companionate marriage theory of Ben Lindsey, was selling apples on the streets today, but not because he had to.

"I haven't been reduced to this by any economic circumstance," he said. "I am a relief apple seller. Even apple sellers have to eat you know, so I relieve them, that they may dash over to a restaurant for coffee and doughnuts."

Will Send Bonus Back Next Week and Give Congress Chance to Pass It Over Veto.

BY FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—President Hoover sent word to the defiant congressional advocates of the veterans' loan bill today that he would return it to congress next week with a veto.

Flushed with their overwhelming victories in both the senate and house, sponsors of the legislation confidently predicted tonight it would be enacted over the veto—a move that requires a two-thirds majority.

Mr. Hoover's intentions were relayed to the senate by Senator Reed, repubican, Pennsylvania, after Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan, had undertaken to block enactment of other legislation until the president had acted.

Pocket Veto Feared.

Couzens expressed fear of a pocket veto which would kill the legislation without a chance for congress to vote on the presidential objections. With this assurance from the White House, the Michigan senator ended his campaign.

About the same time Reed was informing the senate that a veto would come next week, the president made it known at the White House that he would announce his decision next week.

In his regular press conference, the

WOMAN IS KILLED IN CROSSING CRASH

Mrs. H. T. Pause's Neck Is Broken When Switch Engine Demolishes Auto

Mrs. H. T. Pause, 32, of 2060 McLendon avenue, was instantly killed and her husband slightly injured when the car she was driving was struck by a Southern Railway switch engine at the crossing on Irwin street, shortly after 10 o'clock Friday night.

Mrs. Pause and her husband were returning home from their restaurant at 174 Spring street, and were prevented from seeing the engine by buildings on either side of the street. She drove onto the tracks directly in the path of the oncoming engine, it was reported.

The car was demolished and Mrs. Pause was killed almost instantly, having sustained a broken neck. A Patterson ambulance was summoned and carried Mrs. Pause and her husband to the Atlanta hospital, where the woman was pronounced dead. Mr. Pause was found to have sustained severe scalp lacerations, but his condition was not regarded as serious. He was kept at the hospital Friday night for observation.

The yard engine that struck the car operates from Inman Yards to Decatur, it was learned from railroad officials, but the name of the engineer was not ascertained. H. M. Patterson & Son have arrangements in charge for Mrs. Pause.

SENATE RECEIVES ALL DATA STUDIED BY WICKERSHAM

MANY STATEMENTS HELD CONFIDENTIAL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—A vast conglomeration of surveys and testimony—the material upon which the Wickersham commission prepared its conflicting prohibition report—was dumped before the senate today at its request.

Ranging from investigations into every known liquor system throughout the world to surveys of liquor conditions in 32 states, the material nevertheless constituted but a part of the commission's data.

It was transmitted in response to a resolution by Senator Tydings, democrat, Maryland, an anti-prohibitionist, asking for all non-secret data, and on this ground the commission apparently withheld intimate testimony not only from Attorney-General Mitchell and Secretary Mellon but also the statements of other high officials.

Highlights of the mass of data were:

An unexpected suggestion from Prohibition Director Woodcock while an investigator for the commission, that the solution of the "troublesome question" of prohibition may lie "not in state, county, or district option, but home option."

"It could be put into effect by a simple administrative policy—to make no effort to overcome the difficulties that legally exist in getting evidence as to violations in the home."

The prohibition bureau reported less consumption of liquor under prohibition than in saloon days. It estimated the nation consumed 1.705 gallons of liquor per capita in pre-prohibition days and only .602 gallons per person in 1930.

A two-volume statement from Henry S. Dennison and Albert Sawyer, the commission's chief investigators, denouncing present dry law conditions but concluding: "There has not yet been any true test of the prohibition laws."

A statement from Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant attorney-general in charge of prohibition and now counsel for a grape concentrate concern, that it was the "clear intent" of congress to "exempt from prosecution the manufacture of limited quantities of wine in the home," and that prohibition officials had taken this stand as far back as 1925.

Surveys made principally under the direction of Dr. James M. Doran, former prohibition commissioner, of conditions under the dry laws in 32 states not including such districts as Maryland, New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts, generally described as wet.

A statement from James M. Britt, former general counsel of the prohibition bureau, that the dry law would soon have "an equal average degree of

HOOVER IGNORES LIST OF SCHALL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—President Hoover disregarded the 10 candidates suggested by Senator Thomas D. Schall, republican, Minnesota, for a vacant federal judgeship in that state, and today sent to the senate the nomination of Gunnar H. Nordbye.

Schall, who has been waging open warfare for weeks against Mr. Hoover and Attorney General Mitchell on this item of Minnesota patronage, charged to the senate that this was "a studied affront to me" on the part of Mitchell.

Openly announcing he would try to block confirmation of Nordbye, Schall said:

"I will not lend myself to the scheme of the attorney general in filling federal judgeships in my state with his 'right-minded' sort whose sympathies are not with the common man, whose legal bent and natural inclinations are 'properly right-minded' to the exclusion of humanity."

Schall just yesterday abandoned his vigorous fight for appointment of Ernest Michel, who was turned down by Mitchell and Mr. Hoover at Mitchell's request. Schall submitted, at Mr. Hoover's suggestion, 10 other names as his candidates.

"The administration informed me that the department of justice is lacking information regarding them, although all of them have resided in the state a lifetime," Schall said.

He said Nordbye was appointed to the district bench in Minnesota by Governor Christianson "whom I defeated for the republican nomination to the senate by approximately 100,000 votes."

He added that Christianson opposed him after he was nominated last fall, and was joined by "our democratic attorney-general, Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Nordbye, because of Mr. Nordbye's connections and affiliations with this smug 'right-minded, public-utility' loving crowd."

Recipe from The Atlanta Constitution for

Cornpone

Cornpone — Work corn meal with hot, but not boiling water, for ten minutes or longer, to dissolve the meal. Fashion into pone shape and place on greased griddle. Cook over medium fire for thirty minutes and you will have real old-time cornpone.

Potlikker

Potlikker—Turnip greens are the best medium for this liquid. Boil the turnip greens with a piece of fat pork until done. Pour off liquid, or potlikker, while hot.

REFUNDING BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—The house today passed the Hawley bill to authorize the issuance of $8,000,000,000 in bonds for refunding maturing liberty loan bonds.

The measure, which now goes to the senate, would allow the treasury to issue new bonds for $8,000,000,000, increasing the authorized limit of bonds to $28,000,000,000.

The new issue will enable the treasury to meet $1,933,545,000 of first liberty loan bonds callable in 1932, and $6,268,241,000 in fourth liberty loan bonds callable in 1933.

The measure does not increase the public debt.

Footballers Seeking Mutilator of Dog

EVANSTON, Ill., Feb. 20.—(AP) College boys as well as Evanston police today were looking for a person who apparently chopped off a dog's tail when the animal resented the theft of a silver-plated collar.

The complaint was made by Timothy Lowry, former center and captain of Northwestern University's football team. His dog Gimme, an Irish terrier, was the victim. His plight was discovered when he came home last night, minus the collar and his tail.

Two detectives were assigned to bring the culprit to justice.

BRITON "CRACKS UP" IN EASTERN AFRICA

PALAPYE ROADS, Bechuanaland, British East Africa, Feb. 20.—(AP)—The British aviator, Tommy Rose, who left Lympne airdrome, England, February 1., in an attempt to lower the flight record from England to Capetown, crashed here today but was not hurt. The undercarriage of his machine collapsed in the fall.

DO YOU
JUST BUY SUGAR?

When buying groceries, do you just buy—"sugar"—taking any that is given you? All sugar is not alike, and you should select it with care just as you do your other foods. DIXIE CRYSTALS Sugar is made in the Southland, is shipped to your grocer promptly. It is always pure, finely granular, and remarkably free from lumps. DIXIE CRYSTALS dissolves easily and completely, leaving no wasteful residue in the cups. If you have never used this fine sugar, be sure to specify DIXIE CRYSTALS to your grocer. You will find that there is pride and satisfaction in having—"The Sweetest Sugar Ever Sold" on your table.

HEAD OF LEGION ARRIVES TODAY

Colonel Ralph T. O'Neil, of Topeka, Kans., national commander of the American Legion, will arrive in Atlanta this afternoon with his party, from Savannah, and will be the guest of honor at an informal dinner at 7:30 o'clock tonight, it was announced Friday.

With Colonel O'Neil will be Russell Cook, of Indianapolis, Ind., director of Americanism for the legion, Mrs. Cook and Frank E. Samuel, of Indianapolis, assistant adjutant. The party will travel by motor car, and will have headquarters at the Ansley hotel.

Nelson Trust Purchases Million in Art Works

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Acquisition of more than a million dollars' worth of art treasures in the last year by the William Rochill Nelson trust, of Kansas City, Mo., was related by the New York Times today.

The objects include more than a score of paintings by Rubens, Rembrandt, Veronese, Gainsborough, Claude Lorrain, Hobema, David and Diaz and Corot; pieces from the famous Guelph collection, a Greek stele of the fourteenth century, B. C., and a bronze by Giovanni Bologgna.

The purchases were made here and in Europe by Harold Woodbury Parsons, art adviser to the trust and European representative of the Cleveland Museum of Art. Confirming their acquisition, he said some were on exhibition in Kansas City and others were on the way from abroad.

RAIL FINANCING CONTROL URGED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—A manual of American railroad ownership was laid before congress today by the house interstate commerce committee with a recommendation for legislation to put under federal control holding corporations engaged in acquiring domination over operating railroad systems.

Chairman Parker summarized the findings of the long investigations by declaring that 14 railroad groups—some of which are unified railroad systems—control 210,000 miles of the 260,000 of the first-class railroads in the country.

The attendant report asserted that the holding company has become "a convenient instrumentality in the terrific struggle of railway giants of the east over coveted property" incident to the proposal to put all of the major eastern railroad systems into four companies. To some degree the consolidation movement had extended as well into the west, it said.

In spite of recent concentration of railroad ownership, the investigation determined that 840,000 individuals and corporations held railroad stocks in the major groups which the report described.

Listing the 14 systems in control of major railroad facilities, the report attributed to the group controlled by O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, of Cleveland, 28,631 miles; Great Northern-Northern Pacific, 27,421; Pennsylvania, 23,498; Southern Pacific, 14,484; St. Louis-San Francisco, 14,161; Atlantic Coast Line, 13,989; Atchison, 13,166; New York Central, 13,006; Baltimore & Ohio, 11,269; Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific, 11,247; Chicago & Northwestern, 10,205; Union Pacific, 10,157; Southern, 10,036; Illinois Central, 9,109.

Reviewing the situation as to holding corporations, the report held that these had been used chiefly by the Van Sweringen group and the Pennsylvania system.

The rise of the Van Sweringen railroad empire was described as beginning in 1916 when the two Cleveland men purchased the Nickel Plate railroad from the New York Central. In this connection, the report said, "it should be stated that the records examined did not disclose that financial assistance was received from the New York Central railroad or other carriers."

In subsequent years, utilizing 32 different corporations, it was stated, the Van Sweringen interests acquired the Chesapeake & Ohio, Erie, Pere Marquette, Wheeling & Lake Erie and Missouri-Pacific railroads. In addition, they hold a half interest directly or indirectly in the Denver, Rio Grande Western and an option on a 50 per cent block of stock of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois.

The Alleghany Corporation was said to be the principal asset holding organization of the group but that company in turn was asserted to be controlled by the Vanness Company.

Of this latter enterprise, assets of which were about $75,000,000 on April 30, last year, the Van Sweringens personally were 80 per cent owners. Incident to the analysis of this financial structure, the report presented some payments made by the Vanness company for professional and legal services of individuals.

The principal item was compensation given Bird M. Robinson, president of the American Short Line Railroad Association, at the rate of $100,000 a year for the entire year 1929 and four months to April 30, of 1930. These payments were approved, the report further stated, by the executive board of the Short Line Association and represented the cost of data and services rendered in connection with consolidation activities.

As to the Pennsylvania system, the investigation disclosed that that company and its affiliate, the Pennroad Corporation, had increased stock holdings during the last two or three years particularly in New England lines, including the Boston & Maine and the New Haven, retaining possession as well of substantial blocks of Norfolk & Western, Lehigh Valley and Wabash railroad securities.

"... and a loaf of Merita, please"
—it happens a million times a week

THE most exacting food jury in the world has made it necessary to bake nearly a million and a half loaves of Merita Bread every week. The women of the South know good food, and they have made Merita the largest selling bread in all the South.

Any product that gains so overwhelming a vote from Southern women must be good. And Merita Bread is good. Made with milk and other good, selected, tested ingredients. Mixed and baked under the keen eyes of master bakers. Good, because American Bakeries Company demands that every one of its products, bread, rolls or cake, be the best of its kind on the shelves of your grocer.

Don't just say, "Give me a loaf of bread." Say, "Give me a loaf of Merita"—and your grocer will see that you get it.

BY JESSIE MARIE DeBOTH

We sometimes wonder if soup-making is a lost art in this country. One so rarely finds an honest-to-goodness flavorsome soup. What with the canned varieties, powdered soups and bouillon cubes, the short order cook pays scant attention to a real soup kettle. These substitutes all have their uses, and often result in better soups than some homemade ones, but there are times when a hearty soup is mighty welcome.

A neighbor of ours used to prepare marvelous soups for her invalid friends. Their unusual flavors prompted someone to ask her husband concerning the ingredients. His reply was characteristically terse. "She seasons them with her brains!" It is true enough that mere recipes are a small part of soup making. Yet there is nothing about their technique that cannot easily be learned.

Short-cut methods answer admirably in making veegtable purees and cream soups, but genuine soup stock takes plenty of time. That seems to be the handicap which staggers a young cook, yet it really means little attention, once the cooking is under way, and nearly every woman has a day at home occasionally. Some waggish friend wrote across our back door frame "Stay at home once in a while," but we never located the source of this kindly advice.

Perhaps another reason for the decline in soup-making is because soup is classed as just the beginning of a meal, not an integral part of it. This is true enough of light soup, such as consomme or bouillon, but a rich soup with meat and vegetables in it may well be the main dish of the meal. light salad and fruit dessert complete a satisfactory home dinner. Then, it is just as easy when making hearty soup to prepare enough for another meal. This can be varied somewhat without much effort in case an exact repetition be undesirable. For the children's lunch good soup is always relished. They seem to prefer thickened mixtures, and this is easily managed with either flour, tapioca, rice, barley or rolled oats. The cereals give both body and extra food value, but these facts need not be advertised before finicky children. Of all fatal statements, "This is so good for you," is about the worst. Make it taste good, then hold your peace.

To get down to our soup-making. A good sized kettle of aluminum or enamel is the first requisite, and your preserving kettle will do nicely, if it has a close-fitting lid. Meat must be fresh, as the least bit of weathered skin or trace of staleness ruins the flavor. Roasting obliterates an off taste by the rich flavor of browning, but meats for boiling and soup-making must be in prime condition. The butcher will crack the bone for you. To secure the greatest flavor from the meat, cut it in small pieces and let it stand in the cold water at least an hour before heating it. The juices drawn out are the foundation of good soup, yet the true food value remains in the meat. So do not fancy that because meat is dry and tasteless it has become useless. Added seasoning and fat convert the scorned soup meat into delicious dishes. So serve some meat in the soup if it is to be nourishing as well as palatable.

It is obvious that meat needs longer cooking than vegetables. We find that strong juiced vegetables such as carrot, turnip and cabbage produce a rank taste when overcooked. So we generally cooked the meat for several hours before adding any vegetables. It is possible, however, when it proves more convenient, to add the vegetables at the start and remove them as soon as tender. Tie them in a coarse cheese cloth, for easy removal. They can be added to the soup again at serving time. Herbs and seasonings may be put with the meat at the start. Inspect the bones to be sure there are no tiny loose particles to make trouble later. Some bone is necessary for successful soup making. Let the contents of the kettle heat very slowly, after they have stood as directed. Peppercorns, bay leaf, thyme, garlic, parsley, etc., should be placed in a good sized tea ball so they can be removed without straining. The amount of water varies with the proportion of meat and bone. A quart of water to a pound of meat makes a flavorsome soup; less water gives a rich broth, more a thin disappointment. Soup is like coffee, it can be diluted if too strong, but nothing under heaven can redeem it when weak.

The French people have a saying about the soup kettle which is most expressive. "It should only smile, never laugh." The real secret is to regulate the heat so the liquid barely ripples, never breaking into boiling bubbles. When once regulated it may be left for hours. It can't boil over and won't cook dry. Give it plenty of time, though. Four hours is good, and six is better, if the amount is large.

It is wise to make soup the day beforehand, if possible. Then there is ample time to remove bone, seasonings and vegetables and let the soup get truly cold. In this way the coat of fat becomes firm and is easily taken off. It forms a protection, too, if soup is to be kept several days. Do not leave any vegetables in such stock for they invite spoilage.

Dried mushrooms are helpful in soup-making, onion is indispensable and some of the table sauces make an agreeable finish. Beef is the standard meat, but lamb and veal make delightful soups alone or in combination with beef. The shin and hock are the chosen cuts for soup. Often one has bones from a roast or steak to add to a fresh soup bone. Blends of several vegetables are usually better than a single kind. It is surprising to find what splendid soups can be made at small expense.

Casserole of Salmon.

One can (2 cups) salmon, drained and flaked; 2 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca, uncooked; 1 cup milk; 2 tablespoons butter; 1-4 teaspoon salt; dash of pepper, dash of paprika.

Combine ingredients in order given. Turn into greased casserole. Bake in hot oven 25 minutes, stirring mixture twice during first 10 minutes of baking. Serves six. Small baking powder biscuits may be placed on top of salmon mixture after it has baked 10 minutes.

MRS. BRUCE HOME, READY TO GO AGAIN

CROYDON, England, Feb. 20.—(AP) Mrs. Victor Bruce, British woman aviator, came down here in her blue bird plane from Lympne airdrome this afternoon, completing a trip around the world by sea and air. Frederick Montague, undersecretary of state for air, and a group of other notables were here to meet her.

In the flight from Lympne she was escorted by several planes whose pilots included Amy Johnson, Winifred Spooner and Squadron Leader Ridley.

Her husband and son also were at the field and sat with Mrs. Bruce while she talked to newspapermen.

"I'm quite game to fly the Atlantic to Buenos Aires for the British trade exposition if I can get a machine," she said, "It's only 1,250 miles, twice as far as I flew across the Yellow sea. I would go by way of Gibraltar to Dakar, then across to Natal and on to Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires."

GEORGIA BUILDERS REPORTED SMALL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—The number of construction contractors in Georgia is very small as compared with most of the states, figures given out by the census bureau today show. According to the reports received there are but 863 such contractors in the state, of whom 206 are doing a business of more than $25,000 yearly.

In contrast to this in California there are 14,811 with 2,763 doing more than $25,000 worth of work. In proportion to population, however, Connecticut leads the country having 302.7 contractors for every 100,000 population. Like figures in Georgia show but 23.5.

DETROIT POLICE BREAK THEFT CHAIN IN ARRESTS

DETROIT, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Over 50 robberies in and about Detroit have been cleared up, according to police, with the arrest here early this morning of seven men, including Joseph Salvo, who claims to be a nephew of Al Capone.

Three of the men are said to have admitted kidnaping a negro chauffeur yesterday and using his machine for robberies in Ann Arbor. An attempt to repeat that act, police say, was frustrated by their arrest.

FRENCH MILITARY BUDGET INCREASED

PARIS, Feb. 20.—(AP)—The ministry of war budget, which is to be deposited with parliament tonight and debated tomorrow amounts to 6,459,000,000 francs—approximately $258,000,000.

Of the total $190,000,000 is at present allocated to metropolitan troops; $68,000,000 for overseas colonial troops. The whole amount represents an increase of approximately $3,000,000 over last year's expenditures.

PORTLAND BUILDER'S CONDITION IMPROVED

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 20.—(AP)—Known on two continents as "The Friend of Kings," Samuel Hill, builder and philanthropist, apparently was slowly recovering today from a severe illness that necessitated a major operation yesterday. He has been in a hospital here since February 9.

The nature of the operation was not revealed but it was known Hill suffered from a stomach and intestinal disorder. His condition was described as "favorable."

A son-in-law of the late James Hill, pioneer builder of railroads, Samuel Hill is internationally known in the construction and engineering fields. He was decorated by France, Rumania, Belgium and Japan during the World War for his services in road building and transportation supervision.

In 1922 he was host to Marshal Joffre, when the French hero toured the United States. Several years ago, when Queen Marie, of Rumania, visited this country, Hill entertained the royal party on the Pacific coast. Queen Marie dedicated the Rumanian room of Maryhill castle, Hill's international museum on the banks of the Columbia river.

ECKFORD AND M'RAE TO JOIN TAX PARLEY

Legislators-Elect Announce Intention To Attend Conference.

George A. Eckford and William G. McRae, Fulton county legislators-elect, Friday declared they would appear at a suggested conference between borough officials and Fulton and DeKalb representatives in the assembly with the avowed purpose of assisting in solution of the fiscal problems of the borough.

Eckford, however, suggested that the meeting be held at a time and place at which taxpayers could be present and offer their views concerning any proposed taxes.

Probabilities are that the borough of Atlanta will seek approximately $1,000,000 additional revenue a year and will ask legislative sanction of this plan in order to relieve a financial crisis.

Mayor James L. Key suggested the two-county caucus.

FUND ADMINISTRATION TAKEN FROM RITCHIE

Administration of a repair and replacement fund of approximately $171,000 in the school department Friday afternoon was taken from Raymond R. Ritchie, assistant superintendent of schools, and placed under the dictatorship of a committee of three headed by School Commissioner S. C. Nolan.

This action was taken at a special meeting of the board of education, where a plan to subject administration to every ward representative on the board was beaten by a margin of only one vote.

Nolan was author of the measure which passed and which established the dictatorship for the maintenance department repair accounts. Commissioner William C. Slate, of the second ward, was author of the plan to force conference with each ward representative before any money was expended in any ward.

W. W. Gaines, president of the board, declared he would appoint the two other members later.

Keynoter Bowers To Speak Tonight In Emory Series

"Myths and Caricatures of History" will be discussed by Claude G. Bowers, member of the editorial staff of the New York World, at 8 o'clock tonight in the Emory University auditorium. Mr. Bowers will come to Atlanta from the press institute at Athens.

The talk tonight will be the fourth presentation on the program of the Student Lecture Association. The next event on the program will be an address on March 6 by Senor Salvador de Madariaga, Spanish author and political science expert. Vachel Lindsay, American poet-author, will follow Senor Madariaga.

Mr. Bowers delivered the keynote address at the democratic national convention in Houston, Texas. He is author of "Jefferson and Hamilton," "Party Battles of the Jackson Period," and "The Struggle for Democracy in America."

GUILLE TO CONDUCT RALLY HERE SUNDAY

Dr. George E. Guille, president of William Jennings Bryan Memorial University, Dayton, Tenn., will conduct a citywide evangelistic rally and mass meeting at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Baptist Tabernacle.

Under the leadership of Enrico Leide, conductor of the Fox theater concert orchestra, Charlie Jarrell's Agoga Little Symphony group, augmented to 20 pieces, will give a sacred concert. Leide will be guest conductor of the orchestra through courtesy of the Fox theater management, and will offer a cello solo, "Reve Angelique," by Anton Rubinstein. The "Bright Spot" quartet and other radio artists will be heard.

Dr. Gullie will hold services twice daily in the former main dining room of the Kimball house under auspices of the Southern Evangelistic Association. Noonday meetings will be from 12 to 1 o'clock, and meetings will be held each night at 7:30 o'clock, through March 1. Dr. Guille was connected with the extension department of the Moody Bible Institute, of Chicago, for more than 20 years.

FINAL RITES SUNDAY FOR VICTIM OF POISON

Services for Mrs. Emma Parish, 64, of 416 Lee street, who died Thursday at Grady hospital from the effects of a dose of self-administered poison taken accidentally, will be conducted at 10 o'clock Sunday morning at the chapel of Sam R. Greenberg & Co.

The Rev. C. C. Light will officiate, and interment will be in Oakland cemetery. Mrs. Parish is survived by a son, C. D. Parish; two daughters, Mrs. S. B. Warren and Mrs. Minnie Hartsfield; three brothers, Dr. R. N. Weaver and Sam Weaver, of Atlanta, and C. H. Weaver, of Birmingham.

JONES, ROBERT NAMED TO WHEEL CO. BOARD

Election of Robert T. (Bobby) Jones, Jr., golf champion, and L. W. (Chip) Robert, president of Robert & Company, engineers, as members of the board of directors of the Southern Wheel Company was announced Friday from the company's offices in the Grand Central building, New York city. Jones' law firm of Jones, Evins, Powers and Jones, was named counsel for the corporation.

The wheel company is one of the world's largest manufacturers of railway and street car wheels. It has plants in Atlanta and Savannah, as well as in Birmingham, Ala.; Portsmouth, Va.; St. Louis, Mo.; Sayre, Pa.; Rochester, N. Y.; Toledo, Ohio; Hammond, Ind., and other cities.

W. F. Cutler, president of the company, recently visited Atlanta with other officers of the company. Robert & Co. has served as engineers for the corporation for many years.

'40 AND 8' PURPOSES EXPLAINED BY PERRY

The society of "40 and 8," playground of the legion, has no purposes of its own, but directs its efforts toward accomplishment of American Legion objectives, Charles E. Perry, of Kittery Point, Maine, chef de chemin de fer of the national "40 and 8," told Atlanta Post No. 1, American Legion, Friday at a luncheon in the Ansley civic room.

Perry was the guest of honor Friday night at the local "40 and 8" meeting at the Chamber of Commerce.

A talk by Perry on the child welfare work of the "40 and 8" and the legion, in which he said that $1,000 was given to the Shriners' hospital for crippled children in recognition of the hospital's work for legion wards, was broadcast over radio station WGST. Entertainment features of the luncheon also were broadcast, with Ray Baxter as announcer.

Sun Will Hide Behind Clouds, Forecast Here

Partly cloudy weather is forecast for Atlanta today and Sunday, but there is little likelihood of rain, C. F. von Herrmann, the government forecaster, said Friday.

"There'll be a few clouds to hide the sun for a good portion of Saturday but unless they pick up some precipitation on the way, there won't be any rain," the meteorologist said.

Today's temperature range is expected to be similar to that of Friday when a low of 38 and a high of 59 was recorded.

ELKS OF LAGRANGE VISITED BY HARDY

Vice President J. Gordon Hardy, of the Georgia Elks Association, paid his official visit to LaGrange Lodge No. 1084 Thursday night. After the meeting visitors joined with the officers and members of LaGrange lodge in an old-fashioned Georgia barbecue. The LaGrange lodge also was invited to visit Atlanta lodge on the night of Thursday, February 26, when Griffin Lodge No. 1207 will be guests.

Those accompanying Mr. Hardy to LaGrange were: H. J. Sanders, Carl C. Withrow, J. O. Perry, Jr., Arthur I. May, Ben May, S. R. Greenblatt, I. Leonard Crawford, H. W. Chambers, Frank R. Fling, William C. Denny, Barney Bernard, Newman Laser, Frank M. Robertson, E. M. Pearce, James H. Falks, Frank J. Rives, James L. Jones, J. L. Killebrew, O. W. Gilbert, R. L. Simmers, Jack Greene, M. P. Word, Peter La Terza, Charles A. Ryder, A. O. Patterson, George E. Fuller, John F. Warwick and R. E. Lee Reynolds.

DRIVERS INDICTED IN FATAL ACCIDENT

W. A. Gillentine, 322 Ponce de Leon avenue, and C. S. Connell, 570 Cresthill avenue, Friday were bound over to the Fulton grand jury under bonds of $1,000 each by Recorder A. W. Callaway in police court following a hearing on the accident in which V. C. Eads, of 52 Lafayette drive, met death on Friday of last week.

Recorder Callaway held both drivers for involuntary manslaughter, stating that a more searching investigation should be made, in view of varying testimony. Eads was riding in the rumble seat of Gillentine's car when the machine collided with Connell's automobile at Forrest avenue and Courtland street.

TAX ON CHAIN STORES IS HELD UNLAWFUL

Another decision holding the Georgia chain store tax unconstitutional was handed down Friday by the state supreme court which last week decided adversely to the state the injunction brought by the Woolworth Company and others.

Suits of the Underwood Typewriter and National Biscuit Companies alleged that, although they maintained branch offices in Georgia, their sales were made by agents and the offices were not used as salesrooms.

The higher court also upheld the superior court of Meriwether county in allowing nonsuits in the case of W. T. Norris against that county and the state highway board. Norris sought redress for damages he alleged was caused by the improper construction of a culvert on his farm.

GANGSTER'S WIFE SEEN FLEEING FROM DEATH

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(AP)—The New York American today printed a letter which it said indicated that the wife of Frank Marco, slain Chicago gangster, had fled from her hotel because she believed his killers had marked her for the next victim.

Written by Marco to his wife from Chicago, the undated letter was quoted by the American in part as follows:

"Dear Mel: I want to warn you about keeping quiet. You know what happened to Lil. I know, baby, that you wouldn't deliberately open your mouth and say things, but you do get gabby when you're drinking."

PASS IT AND PULL OUT.

The people of the state will be greatly benefited and gratified if the senate of the general assembly will quickly pass the rentals discount bill and pull out for home. No imaginable benefit can come out of a prolonged discussion of the measure by the senate. The members of that body have heard or read all the opponents of it have offered to the house. That body, notwithstanding, passed the bill by an almost three-to-one vote.

The bill requires the people to pay a fearful price for the ready cash to keep some of the vital institutions of the state in operation. But the people are responsible for the acts of the men they elected to conduct the state and must pay the costs of the ignorance and errors of their representatives.

The situation is an unprecedented example of state government mismanagement, but the duty of the hour is to pass the rentals discount bill without further debate and delay. The people are tired of paying $2,500 a day for futile windjamming in the legislative halls. They are reconciled to the huge loss of $2,000,000 of their future tax money and do not want more of that money spent in useless oratory and wrangling. Selling the state road rentals is the only visible relief, so the legislature will do well to order that quickly and "pull its freight" away from the capitol.

THE COW-PATH TO PROFITS.

The editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, one of the directors of the great Associated Press, is also a practical farmer and economist. Editor Murphy owns and operates a small ranch of 4,000 acres on which he raises crops and cattle of the finer breeds. He is entitled to be listened to when he speaks about farming.

In an article, for which he assumes full responsibility to make good with proofs, he declares that the farmers of the northwest are in comfortable conditions and not begging the government to save them from want and starvation. They prefer that Uncle Sam should attend to his lawful business and let them do the same.

Editor Murphy sets out that the northwestern farmers have put themselves in their independent positions by sticking to the "cow-path to prosperity," which is to follow the "cow-sow-hen-steer" system of farming. Translated into Georgia vernacular that means the "cow-hog-hen" system so long and so strongly urged by The Constitution as the self-supporting, redemptive policy for Georgia farmers.

Recent demonstrations in the state have supplied the unbreakable proof that the Georgia farmer who adopts that system, and follows it with industry and business sense, soon works out of debt, gilt-edges the value of his farm, and gets a "walk right in" welcome at the bank and the store.

We do not argue the sure rewards of that sensible farm policy any more. It is the Appian way to successful agriculture in Georgia, but there is no law of God or man that can compel a clodhopping farmer to mend his ways and practice it.

King George knighted Malcolm Campbell in admiration for any man who can "go some" while he himself has to stand hitched.

The police grafters in New York refuse to tell "where they got it," which shows that the spirit of Dick Croker still lives in them.

Secretary Mellon answers the senators who joked about him by telling them just to wait until pay day arrives for their bounty bills.

After Hoover will have been steam-rollered by congress he can sympathize with several predecessors who were similarly flattened instead of flattered.

ATLANTA'S UNEMPLOYED.

The census returns on unemployment in Atlanta, as taken last April, include Class A (persons out of a job, able to work and looking for a job) and Class B (persons having jobs, but on lay-off without pay, excluding those sick or voluntarily idle).

Of the 130,154 gainful workers in the borough of Atlanta 6,580 of Class A and 1,460 of Class B were reported unemployed, the percentages being 5.1 and 1.1, respectively. The largest percentage of unemployed in any industry was 15.6 of Class A and 3.7 of Class B in the building industry.

In wholesale and retail trade of 19,952 only 4.4 per cent were jobless and less than 1 per cent laid off without pay. The lowest percentages, all under 3 per cent, were in professional service, banking, insurance, real estate, and public services like transportation, telegraphs and telephones. In cotton and other textile mills, food and allied industries, and in domestic service the percentages were all under 5 per cent.

The whole showing, viewed in comparison with the returns from other cities, even larger than Atlanta, and more equipped with usually active industries, is exceedingly favorable to the manner in which our people were weathering the increasing stress of business depression nearly a year ago. They were on the census tables distinctly more employed and comfortable than their fellow-citizens in other southern cities that are hot rivals of Atlanta for population and business enterprise.

OUR ALIEN ENEMIES.

There is a pleasing hope that congress will, before adjournment, pass the proposed legislation to reduce immigration quotas to 10 per cent of their present proportions and to increase the ability of the department of labor to multiply the rate of deportations of aliens unlawfully in this country and those whose criminal records make them dangerous residents.

The demand for such legislation has come to the congress from all parts of the Union. Both labor and law enforcement interests consider it urgent that job-hunters from over the globe, especially from Europe, be barred almost absolutely and that those aliens who have sneaked in upon us and those who have turned to careers of crime be shipped back to prey upon their own countries instead of ours.

There is neither justice nor humanity in allowing the United States to be continued as the feeding ground of foreigners who do not intend to become citizens of the nation, who usurp the work needed by our own people, and who defy and break our laws of peace and protection.

The supreme court of the United States long ago decided as follows concerning the power of the states:

"They may remove from their territory any person whose presence they may think dangerous to their peace, or in any way injurious to their interest."

The federal government has like right and power, and that should cover the case of the undesirable aliens and the red communists as well. And the day approaches when that power will need to be invoked and drastically applied to all foreign invaders of our peace and social order.

Times have changed. Once our great men were in congress; now they are well out of it.

Strong doubts are now expressed that Huey Long ever saw a real honest-to-goodness cornpone.

The ex-kaiser has bought a watch that once belonged to Frederick the Great. It was an auction bargain, showing that Bill is economizing.

The women may stand for the petticoat revival, but they sho'ly will kick at pantelettes.

The democratic national committee will ignore the prohibition problem. The only dry thing they will consider is their campaign chest.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Histoire Parisienne.

It is no secret to anybody in Paris that the government of France was in serious difficulty recently. The danger lay not with the chamber of deputies either. That illustrious body of lawgivers who dispatch an administration about once every three months happened to be on vacation. No, it was the Comedie Francaise, the famous state theater that caused all the rumpus. Five, six, ten of its glories, Madame Cecile Sorel at their head, sent in their resignations. What had happened? The ministry of beaux arts had just appointed a beautiful young actress to the staff of the theater. The old guard protested. They said it was an act of favoritism, that appointment, a "traffic of influence" which the severity of French morals could not tolerate. Pretty soon the truth came out and the newspapers published every detail. In short it seems that a prominent deputy had fallen in love with the young actress aforementioned. She told him her ambition was to play on the stage of the Comedie one day. Nothing looked easier to the gallant lover. He sped away forthwith to the Beaux Arts building. "I come to ask a little favor," he is reported to have said to the minister, "a mere bagatelle. A young lady whom I adore asks as proof of my loyalty that I obtain her a position with the Comedie. I will tell you her name if you promise to make the appointment. Otherwise I can't promise her."

"All right," said the minister, "if you insist, the matter is settled."

The deputy thanked the amiable chief and went away to carry the good news to his lady love. But a few hour later when notice of the appointment appeared in the papers, the Theater of Moliere was in an uproar. Several actresses sent in their resignation at once. Others threatened to follow. The ministry of beaux arts was informed that the matter looked grave. The premier was told.

"I am not going to expose myself to ridicule in the chamber," he said. "We are not going to be thrown out over an actress."

But the deputy-lover stood pat. "Listen," he said, "I dispose of ten votes in the chamber. That is enough to bring the government to a fall any minute."

"Why didn't you ask the favor for an actress of talent?" they argued with him.

"Talent?" he called out. "Talent, mine is a genius! Is that the way the republic is going to recompense the services of one of its most devoted supporters?"

"We can arrange it perhaps that the lady goes to the Odeon," he was told in an attempt to conciliate him. "Or the Legion of Honor? How about that?"

"I want nothing of you," the infuriated deputy shouted back. "You are false friends. But I warn you, we will see each other again."

That was the end of it, temporarily at least. The members of the Comedie promptly retracted their resignation. But the government is going to face a quiz anyway. Another deputy has asked that the names be published of all parliamentarians who in the last ten years sought favors on behalf of comediennes and tragediennes.

Vanishing Courtesies.

The devastating progress of international standardization and a mechanical speeding up is destroying many of the graceful, if elaborate, forms of French courtesy, the Observer finds. There are people who no longer terminate a letter with the studied compliments which have so long been considered indispensable, and it is not surprising, therefore, that corresponding short cuts are being made in professional usages. A literary critic has just announced that the custom of an author sending out his book to the critics, every one by name, with few words of appropriate dedication on the flyleaf, may be considered to be dead. It was in danger when some writers began to slip into copies of the book a visiting card, or even a mere printed piece of paper, with a few words of apology for being unable to sign the dedication in person, owing to absence from Paris.

It received a more cruel blow when an enterprising bookseller, who kept his shop open until midnight, hit upon the idea of announcing that on a certain evening the author would attend and sign all copies purchased. Review copies are still sent to critics at their private addresses, and not anonymously to newspapers, and many of them still bear the autograph indication of the "hommages" of the author, or perhaps a more specially worded compliment; but the latter practice is dying, and perhaps the former will not long survive. Certainly we are drifting back to barbarism.

Governor Declines Respite for Slayers

BY ROBERT QUILLEN

ROBERT QUILLEN

My Dear Louise:

Thanks for the newspaper clipping. It was worth a chuckle, and made the day brighter. But you mustn't take too seriously the witty things written in criticism of Coolidge and his literary efforts.

It is the fashion just now to poke fun at all of the old standards and ideals, and the great authors of the day are the ones that call every established truth a platitude and see good only in ideas that are new.

If you read the work of these fellows, and you can hardly escape it, their caustic wit and facile plausibility will fool you unless you stop to analyze what they say.

Their ardent supporters and mimics are young people; for young people aren't as wise as they will be, and any smart-Aleck who hurls adjectives at the established order of things seems a hero to them.

Don't let the smart boys fool you, Honey.

When they damn truth by calling it a platitude, stop and reflect that every pepigram becomes a platitude when the world gets accustomed to it and every brilliant discovery a truism when everybody knows it.

There isn't anything new under the sun. Every true thing that is written has been written many times before, so that it must seem tiresome platitude to one who has read everything. But the people who have read everything are few, and the ordinary reader finds in ancient truths a great deal that seems original and new to him. The sunset is very old, but think how wonderful it would seem to one who had spent his life in a cave.

The smart-Aleck writers waste much ink in praise of "new ideas," but they never tell us what the new ideas are. I read their work carefully, and I assure you I haven't found a single new idea in the whole of it.

Their fault is that they can't distinguish between "new ideas" and idiocies.

If I should write that all statesmen are pirates, all vices a blessing to mankind and all Americans inferior to Berlin street sweepers, I might boast of giving the world new ideas, but I would be guilty of absurd untruths.

These cynical "young intellectuals," who seem so superior because they berate and denounce the world so wittily, succeed in giving us new ideas only by giving us false ones.

Truth is old. Many thousands of generations of men, equipped with minds much like ours, conceived and expressed, most of the ideas that we are capable of comprehending.

Love,
DAD.

HOLLYWOOD IN PERSON

BY MOLLIE MERRICK.

(Special Dispatch to The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.)

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 20.—(NANA)—At an international conference, the ideal man has just been acclaimed as five feet eight inches in height, weight 138 to 140 pounds, waist 30 to 31 inches and hips 37 inches.

Just about the proportions of John Gilbert, one-time Hollywood panic among the ladies, but now losing out to several other younger—and taller competitors.

Is our standard of male beauty changing? It must be, among movie fans.

The male matinee idol de luxe of the screen at the present time is Gary Cooper. He is the "it" boy of films, the most sought after of the stronger sex, the purveyor of delicious menace, the man who has taken Valentino's place on the screen so far as releasing sex magnetism is concerned, although he plays a far different type of thing.

But Gary Cooper is so tall that his studio doesn't really tell you just what his height is. The six feet one they modestly accredit him with, is, in reality a generous six feet three. His weight is 175 pounds, his waist measure sufficiently small to make a uniform tunic perfection when he wears it, his hips modelled along the ideal athletic lines

Altogether his measurements are far removed from the universal ideal of pulchritude. But his studio finds it difficult to stage personal appearances for him because the ladies mob him to such an extent—and altogether crowd about in such a thoroughly frank and unladylike fashion that it makes a public appearance sort of an endurance test.

Now there's Charles Buddy Rogers—another example of male pulchritude. He comes well within the Hollywood idea of perfect manhood. But he runs a little over the height schedule of the international figures as put out by the tailoring convention:

Buddy is everybody's boy. He is a close second to Gary Cooper in snaring feminine hearts. He is a Beau Brummell of the silver screen. Paramount press department credits him with six feet one inch of height. His wardrobe is said to be one of the most elaborate in Hollywood. His measurements rank him as a tailor's delight.

Hollywood beauties, on the other hand, seldom marry ideal men. There's Kay Francis who just proved herself the exception when she married Kenneth McKenna. He is one of the few Hollywood husbands who has pulchritude, height, slimness, sex-appeal and the rest of the things that go to make up screen "it" in the male persuasion.

Norma Talmadge chose Joseph Schenck. Constance Talmadge married civilians, three times, neither Townsend Netcher, nor her first husband, nor Alastair Whoosit, her second husband, came up to any regulations for male beauty at all. The third Talmadge girl married Buster Keaton—and if you think he has a chance with the tailor's convention you're due for a disappointment.

Greta Garbo, the great, has liked two men since she has been in Hollywood. Mauritz Stiller was far removed from the conventional handsome man of the films, but Jack Gilbert came well within the quota and their romance didn't last.

Janet Gaynor, married to Lydell Peck, a young man of charm, has not chosen any conventional tailor's model at all. He's just a nice six-footer with a lot of white teeth and pleasant brown eyes.

Gloria Swanson chose the Marquis De La Falaise—just about the build of the ideal man of 1931. Dolores Costello picked an ideal in Jack Barrymore, but Ann Harding's husband, Harry Bannister, is well above the quota in measurements. He has a bit more brawn than the tailors' association thinks good form for the modern male.

And then there's Lew Ayres, Hollywood's most recent rage. He's way below the tailor's height quota—but he's way up in the opinion of the local gals.

Health Talks

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

A woman who is employed as housekeeper in one of our great hotels tells me that she believes by practicing the belly breathing I suggested here in an article on Our Chesty Complex she has been able to keep well and fit. "I worked all last winter," she says, "and like others I became worn and taut, but I escaped the fate of a score of our housekeepers who went home in taxis with 'nervous breakdown' or taut muscles and emotional hysterics. I attribute my good fortune to this breathing exercise you recommeded for relaxation."

I am glad to know about it, though I think the lady gives too much credit to the breathing exercise. She probably has more than ordinary good sense and stability to begin with, and this carried her through a time of strain and stress that was a little too much for many of her associates. Still, there is something of value in belly breathing, perhaps more than we have hitherto suggested here.

Dr. Samuel Delano, the New Britain specialist whose successful application of belly breathing in the treatment of lung and bronchial affections we have described here, has found this training in diaphragmatic breathing remarkably helpful in cases of asthma. Dr. Clelia D. Mosher, of Leland Stanford University, another eminent advocate of belly breathing (she doesn't call it by this "Victorian" name, as one of our mincing highbrow magazines has it), has found it both a preventive and a cure for menstrual difficulties of young women. Dr. Israel Rappaport, of New York, observed the shallow diaphragmatic function of patients with arterial disease and high blood pressure and found that belly breathing seldom failed to bring the pressure down thirty millimeters in a short time.

I again recommend this simple exercise to adults who find it difficult to get to sleep nights, especially when there are cold feet and a tension that opposes relaxation.

I want to ask those who adopt—I do not say "try"—belly breathing, if only for its general equalizing effect on the circulation and its wholesome massage of the liver and help to digestion, to report to me what, if any, other effects they experience or believe they experience from the exercise. I have in mind one effect in particular, which several of our—er—pupils have already reported, but I do not wish to suggest it—I prefer to let you see for yourself, and tell me about it.

Now for a brief description of the little exercise or seance—it is no exertion, so you needn't shy off that way.

Every night when you get into bed, lie on your back with knees flexed, rest one or both palms on your belly, not your chest, let your mouth loll open, and draw in a slow, even, quiet breath through the open mouth, noting how the hand is elevated as the belly gradually inflates. Leave your chest out of it—your chest is paralyzed and your belly alone is carrying on the breathing. When the bellows is fully inflated, without straining, then just let the air out again, without any effort whatever. When it is all deflated, blow her up again. From five to ten such inflations constitute an adequate seance. Take your time. No hurry. Repeat the seance on waking in the morning. As week after week passes you will find you are giving a smoother and more efficient performance. It seems very simple, but it is really great medicine.

TWO MEN INDICTED IN FORGERY PROBE

tailing the operations of the alleged ring said one of its members would solicit persons considered friendly to labor, seeking advertisements in a special edition of a workingman's newspaper and obtaining the victim's signature to an advertising contract. This signature, Mr. Boykin's aide said, then was carefully and expertly signed to a check and the check indorsed and cashed.

It was said that inasmuch as some of the checks run well into the hundreds of dollars and that only "a small portion of the forged instruments" have been discovered, the losses suffered by Atlanta men and women due to the operations of the ring may total more than $50,000.

"No person officially connected with the federation of trades or with any of the better known labor journals has had any part whatever in this scheme," Mr. Boykin said. "In fact, the union leaders and the officials of labor publications have done much to aid us in obtaining evidence against the six men under indictment."

Mr. Boykin said that he has more than 100 indictments in preparation and that the total when the grand jury has concluded its inquiry may go beyond 150. Much of the work in obtaining the evidence resulting in the indictment of the six men was done by representatives of the Burns Detective Agency, Mr. Boykin said.

enforcement with our other laws, state and federal."

Testimony from A. O. Wharten, Chicago, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, that "since prohibition I have seen drinking that was never dreamed of."

A statement from William J. Spencer of the American Federation of Labor, that he did not believe "prohibition accomplished anything for the working people," and that a return of beer would stimulate employment and cure the drinking of hard liquor.

A survey of the material turned over to the senate, however, showed that despite its volume much of it was data that had previously been published in various parts of the world.

By far the majority of the material was in pamphlet form, containing studies of liquor systems in the various provinces of Canada, of the Scandinavian systems, conditions in Great Britain, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Cuba and other parts of the world. This was commented upon by Chairman Wickersham in his letter of transmittal to the senate.

"Much of the testimony and many statements given to the commission and evidence laid before it," Wickersham said, "were received as confidential, and therefore fall within the exceptions expressed in the resolution, so that necessarily the documents and statements transmitted contain but a part of the material which the commission took into consideration in the preparation of its report.

"Members of the commission have also interviewed well informed persons in substantially every part of the country and have availed themselves of their personal observations and experience."

ufactured with the remaining 15 per cent but not on government property.

Failure to lease the nitrate plants within 12 months leaves them to the government corporation for the production of fertilizer.

The house conferees contend that the production of fertilizer will consume all the power and leave none to warrant the construction of transmission lines which presented the major battle over the bill in conference.

Bills already are before both the house and senate appropriations committees for the $10,000,000 appropriation authorized to build Cove Creek dam.

The vote came after two hours of debate, an extension to twice the amount usually allowed conference reports on the insistence of administration leaders. Representative Wurzbach, Texas republican, steered the report on behalf of the conference committee, Representatives Ransley, republican, Pennsylvania, the only house conferee who did not approve it, directed the opposition.

Representatives Fort, New Jersey; Treadway, Massachusetts, and Wood, of Indiana, administration republicans, led the attack against the measure which they termed "socialistic," and "invasion of states' rights," and a waste of government funds. No statement was made of the president's attitude toward the bill.

Much of the debate centered on the probability of leasing the nitrate plants for the production of fertilizer. Wurzbach, Representative Reece, of Tennessee, a republican conferee, and the democratic supporters of the bill, were joined by Chairman James, of the military committee, in confidently predicting a lessee could be found for the property.

"The president is going to be able to lease this plant and there will be no surplus power for sale," James said.

Representative Eaton, republican, New Jersey, called the bill "a hunk of sovietism described as fertilizer bag."

Fort said that before a man could qualify as a director of the operating corporation he would have to be either "a liar or a socialist."

"This is the best farm relief measure ever considered by congress," said Representative Almon, democrat, Alabama, in whose district the project is located.

Douglas was the only democrat to speak against the report. In addition to James, Reece and Wurzbach, Representatives Swing, California; Davenport, New York, and Taylor, Tennessee, were republicans who urged its adoption.

president said he would act on the measure next week. He did not specify to the correspondents what his action would be.

Senator Reed, in his brief statement to the senate, said:

"The president has authorized me to say that his intention is to return the bonus bill to the congress in the middle of next week and not in any event later than Thursday of next week with a message giving his reasons for a veto of the bill."

The Pennsylvania senator who opposed the measure which would allow veterans to borrow up to half the face value of their bonus certificates explained to the senate that he had telephoned to the White House when he noticed the filibuster against the naval appropriation bill.

Not Spokesman.

He added, he had "neither the right nor the desire to pose as the spokesman of the president of this body."

Congressional action on the measure was competed today when Vice President Curtis and Speaker Longworth signed it. The bill was approved by the house by a vote of 363 to 39 and in the senate by 72 to 12.

President Hoover in a letter to the senate finance committee on Wednesday objected strenuously to the legislation, contending it would embarrass the treasury and thus might tend to prolong the period of depression. He complained further that it would extend loan privileges to thousands of veterans who did not need assistance. He voiced no objection to legislation for those actually in distress.

The administration still was hopeful tonight that some reflection by congress upon the measure, which was rushed through both the senate and house within four days might change the attitude of some members, but even republican leaders on Capitol Hill conceded no chance of sustaining the veto.

It was agreed, however, that Mr. Hoover would get more support on a veto than was the strength against the original opposition.

The same spirit prevailed on Capitol Hill tonight over this legislation as that which swept aside the veto of President Coolidge seven years ago to the present law authorizing the certificates.

The rumor spread through the senate chamber today that the president was prepared to state in his veto message on the veterans bill that if it were enacted over his veto he would be forced to call congress into extra session this spring to provide ways and means of raising money to meet its obligations.

Reports on Enforcement As Revealed in 32 States

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(UP)—Varying degrees of prohibition enforcement in 32 states were revealed today in reports submitted to the senate as part of the evidence upon which the Wickersham commission based its report on the dry law.

The reports were based on surveys made by attorneys of the federal prohibition bureau early last year at the request of the then prohibition commissioner, Dr. James L. Doran.

The surveys covered many states popularly classified as dry, and others generally considered wet. New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Illinois were notable among the states for which no reports were made public.

The state survey included the following observations:

WISCONSIN—"Liquor has always been plentiful in Wisconsin," the report said, adding that repeal of the state enforcement act had brought an ever "greater flood of intoxicants." Conditions in Madison, the capital, were described as "bad." Drinking was said to be general among both men and women students at the state university. Milwaukee was termed wet, but tribute was paid the city police as being "most efficient." Federal enforcement officers were said to be a "pitiful barrier against an overwhelming torrent of booze."

MISSOURI—Judge Reeves, of Kansas City, was quoted as saying that Kansas City is the dryest it has been in years; that liquor operations are worse in the small towns. The United States attorney at St. Louis told the investigators that drinking was decreasing. The St. Louis prosecuting attorney expressed belief that drinking among young folks of high school age was increasing.

OKLAHOMA—The report stated that lax enforcement in "many" counties was due to: "Incompetency and corruption amongst a considerable number of state and county enforcement officials; corrupt politicians; notoriously weak pardon and parole system; a general feeling of apathy and reluctance on the part of a large percentage of the so-called 'middle-class' of citizens to take violations of the liquor laws seriously."

OHIO—The survey for Ohio said that in many counties there was little need for local enforcement, but that in some of the thickly populated counties, "needing enforcement the most, there is not the proper backing up by the minor courts of the police departments."

KENTUCKY—Local officials were quoted as saying the Jones law had a strong deterrent effect on liquor violators in the eastern part of the state. The sheriff of Newport county stated that "school-teachers said there were more pint bottles found in baskets after basketball games than in saloons." Liquor conditions in Louisville were described as "bad."

MAINE—"The seeds of temperance sowed by past generations have borne abundant fruit in the present Maine generation," the report for that state said.

VERMONT—Violations in Vermont were said to center largely around the cities, with most of the liquor coming from upper New York state.

NORTH Dakota—The examiner reported that this state "has made wonderful progress under state and federal prohibition."

ALABAMA—"Conditions are improving, and Alabama is progressing under prohibition," the report said. "The courts and enforcement agencies are making vigorous efforts to enforce the laws."

PENNSYLVANIA—Greater co-operation on the part of magistrates before whom liquor law violators are brought was held to be the most important need in Pennsylvania. In Philadelphia, the report cited, the police are "for the most part vigorous" in enforcing the law, but this activity is "not followed up by the magistrates and courts."

MINNESOTA—Local officials in Minnesota were said to be inclined to regard prohibition enforcement as the exclusive responsibility of federal force, although honest and conscientious, and alert in enforcing other laws. Allegations of Walter Liggett, magazine author, were termed as "the stuff that dreams and yellow journal stories are made of."

RHODE ISLAND—Enforcement in Rhode Island, only state which did not ratify the 18th amendment, was termed "reasonably satisfactory."

KANSAS—"The federal enforcement officers in the state are wholeheartedly enforcing the law and obtaining excellent results," the report said, "and most of the county and city enforcement officers are sincere in their efforts to enforce the law."

WYOMING—Failure of United States judges to impose "adequate" penalties was held to be one of the greatest obstacles to proper enforcement in that state.

TENNESSEE—United States Commissioner Campbell at Nashville was said to believe that liquor violations and drinking were decreasing and that liquor rings have been broken up. The attorney-general at Memphis thought the "better class" of young people were drinking more, while the sheriff there said he could not see that there had been much decrease in drinking in general. The chief of police at Knoxville said "that they have a good deal of trouble with the young people who get out in autos with fruit jars of liquor."

ARKANSAS — The investigator found conditions "especially bad" in the seven counties bordering on the Mississippi and also in communities near the Texas and Oklahoma state lines. Illicit distilling was said to be general throughout the Ozark region.

VIRGINIA—Practically all officials interviewed by the investigator agreed that federal, state, county and city forces "work in harmony and cooperate about 100 per cent" in enforcing prohibition.

WEST VIRGINIA—The only really wet sentiment in West Virginia centers around the city of Wheeling, the report said.

TEXAS—Enforcement in north Texas was said to be "generally satisfactory." In the oil fields, however, liquor was found to be plentiful. "Plenty of good, moderate-priced liquor is available in both Fort Worth and Dallas . . . Few of the counties in the southern district could by any stretch of the imagination be described as 'bone dry.'" In Galveston "the statutes against liquor, gambling, prostitution and other vices are practically ignored."

CONNECTICUT—The report on Connecticut said "many real steps" in advance" of enforcement have been taken in recent years.

ARIZONA—The investigator was informed that conditions in Arizona had not changed for several years. Moonshining in the mountains and smuggling from Mexico were held to be the two major problems.

NEW MEXICO—Officials interviewed by the investigator agreed New Mexico was dry, but some held that education was needed.

SOUTH CAROLINA — Conditions were described as generally satisfactory, although authorities at Greenville and Spartanburg said they thought drinking had increased somewhat, especially among young people.

IOWA—The report on Iowa revealed a difference of opinion among officials over the amount of drinking. The deputy prohibition administrator at Des Moines held there had been no increase in use of liquor by young people. The chief of the state bureau of investigation and identification was quoted, however, as saying there was more drinking by Iowa young folk than at any time during his 16 years' connection with the state government.

INDIANA—Conditions in the large cities of Indiana were described as "very bad," although there were indications of improvement.

MISSISSIPPI—Conditions have improved under prohibition, but violations are still "too frequent and general," the report said.

MICHIGAN—The Detroit area presents the major prohibition enforcement problem in Michigan, although enforcement in some other large cities leaves something to be desired, the investigator found. Elsewhere, dry laws are enforced "fairly well," the report said.

IDAHO — "General satisfaction" was expressed over the enforcement situation in Idaho.

UTAH—General satisfaction with enforcement conditions in Utah was reported by the investigator.

NORTH CAROLINA—Gradual improvement in liquor conditions was reported by the state attorney-general to the investigator. The chief of police at Raleigh said drinking was increasing among young people, especially among girls. The United States commissioner at Greensboro expressed a similar conviction. At Asheville, the sheriff believed drinking among young women had increased.

FLORIDA—The presence of a "free-spending, sporting class" in the resort colonies of southern Florida "creates a profitable liquor market and, notwithstanding efforts of coast guard, customs and prohibition forces, foreign liquors are available in large quantities," said the report. "Life in the northern section, however, is free from the glitter and glamour." The irregular coast line is an aid to rum-smugglers. Liquor is easily available in Jacksonville, despite a crusade to stop the traffic, the report said.

Common schools	$1,718,700
University system	637.160
Hospitals	477,020
Pensions	403.580
All Other	163,540

The senate amendment, providing that the first 50 per cent of the rental proceeds shall go to the common schools and that they thereafter share on a pro rata basis with other institutions, would yield:

Common schools	$2,308,600
University system	413,440
Hospitals	309,740
All other	106,250

The reduction in the yield to the hospitals, principally to Milledgeville and Alto, would be, under the senate committee amendment provisions, $167,280, while from the pension apportionment made in the house bill there would be taken another $141,610 for the common schools.

Milledgeville Appropriations.

Senators favorable to the house bill Friday, in studying the auditor's analysis, pointed out that the unpaid appropriations to Milledgeville amount to $727,135.57 as compared with $333,880 which this institution would receive under the pro rata distribution proposed in the Battle-Allen measure. Alto would receive $52,020 as compared with its unpaid appropriation as of December 31, also, of $113,485.05.

Due to be called upon under the regular order Tuesday, President W. Cecil Neill, in the senate, took the floor for the second time during the session soon after the upper house convened Friday and asked unanimous consent for the rental discount bill to be given, out of regular order, its second reading. It had been reported the day before.

Third on Calendar.

As the bill now stands, it occupies a place on the calendar behind both the convict lash bill and the powdered milk bill, action on those measures having been deferred during the senate's long debate on motor carrier legislation and on whether it would work Monday or adjourn in honor of the birthday of former President George Washington.

Probabilities are that the upper branch will swing into debate on the Battle-Allen bill, and the Goode senate amendment not later than Wednesday of next week. Hopes of a final senate vote before another week-end adjournment, however, appeared slim as the lawmakers went home Friday.

Little more than a quorum was present in either house when the week-end adjournment was agreed upon. Senator Redwine, in the senate, said that many people had already suggested to him that the legislature had now taken a 45-day holiday and that it was "high time" for it to get down to work. Others members argued that state departments will observe the holiday and that if information was required from them for the dispatch of business it would not be available.

Corporation Tax Debated.

House debate, after it had reversed itself on the question of adjourning until Tuesday, was over the section of the new Boykin income tax bill levying a 4 per cent tax on the net income of all foreign and domestic corporations. The clause was finally adopted without change, after several members had waged a fight to cut the tax to 3 per cent.

Another new bus bill, introduced by Representative McWhorter, of Oglethorpe, hit the house hopper Friday. It would amend the present motor carrier act so that its provisions would apply not only to common carriers but to private carriers operated for hire, in so far as the constitutions of Georgia and the United States will permit. The bill was referred to the committee on railroads after an attempt had been made to have it sent to the ways and means committee.

The house also recommitted the Huddleston bill, taxing motor carriers, to the ways and means for further study and in order, if it is desired, that opponents may have a hearing.

DANCE AT MOSQUE AIDS 'POOR' KITCHEN

The second of two dances, given by a group of Atlanta clubs, was held Friday night at the Shrine mosque for the benefit of the Atlanta Community Kitchen, on Nassau street, which for the last several months has been feeding the poor of the city.

Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, general chairman of the committee in charge of the event, said a sum of several hundred dollars had been realized for the kitchen. The first of the two dances was given Thursday night when a capacity crowd attended.

Those present at the dance were given especial entertainment at 10:30 o'clock when members of the cast of a number of vaudeville acts appearing at local theaters this week and a number of members of the A. B. Marcus Company, playing at the Capitol, appeared and presented several numbers.

General Pershing Sees Allied Training System As Cause of Defeats

Plan of U. S. Troop Movement Satisfies Pershing, After Long Fight—No Rancor Among Conferees at End—French Warn Officers Not To Be "Superior" With Americans.

CHAPTER XLI.

"Speaking in the name of the American army and in the name of the American people," I told the supreme war council during the second day of its session at Abbeville, May 2, 1928," I want you to rtalize that we are ready to bear as large a part as possible of the burden of the war. We all want the same thing, but our means of attaining it is different from yours.

"America declared war independently of the allies and she must face it as soon as possible with a powerful army. There is one capital point to which I wish to call your attention: that is the importance to the morale of our soldiers of fighting under our own flag.

"America is already anxious to know where her army is. The Germans have once more started a strong campaign of propaganda in the United States, the purpose of which is to insinuate that the Allies have so little confidence in the American troops that they are obliged to distribute them among their own divisions.

"The American soldier is as proud as any other, and the time will soon come when our troops, as well as our government, will ask to fight as an autonomous army under the American high command.

"I understand that in Prime Minister Lloyd George's proposal we shall have to examine the situation again in June before deciding for July.

"That is all that I can agree to at present to show my desire for solidarity with the cause of the Allies."

Lloyd George had previously taken up a revised program submitted by myself, and after some discussion he proposed that:

"America give us 120,000 infantrymen and machine gunners in May—the same number in June, with a supplement of 50,000 infantrymen and machine gunners if we 'scrape together' the tonnage to transport them."

He further proposed that the situation be examined again in June before deciding whether there was reason to extend to July the program decided upon for May and June. He then called on the council to accept his plan.

The Agreement Reached.

Inasmuch as the proposal submitted by Lloyd George contemplated the shipment of the numbers mentioned in British tonnage, leaving American shipping entirely free for us to use as we should decide, an agreement was soon reached, substantially as set forth in the following cablegram to the secretary of war:

> Following agreement adopted by supreme war council May 2 at Abbeville. Will cable more in detail later. It is the opinion of the supreme war council that, to carry the war to a successful conclusion, an American army should be formed as early as possible under its own commander and under its own flag. (Then it was thought the war would run to 1919.)
> In order to meet the present emergency it is agreed that American troops should be brought to France as rapidly as allied transportation facilities will permit, and that as far as consistent with the necessity of building up an American army preference be given to infantry and machine gun units for training and service with French and British armies; with the understanding that such infantry and machine gun units are to be withdrawn and united with their own artillery and auxiliary troops into divisions and corps as the discretion of the American commander-in-chief after consultation with the commander in chief of the allied armies in France.
>
> It is also agreed that during May preference should be given to the transportation of infantry and machine gun units of six divisions, and that any excess tonnage shall be devoted to bringing over such troops as may be determined by the American commander-in-chief.
>
> It is further agreed that this program shall be continued during June upon condition that the British government shall furnish transportation for a minimum of 130,000 men in May and 150,000 men in June, with the understanding that the first six divisions of infantry shall go to the British for training and service, and that troops sent over in June shall be allocated for training and service as the American commander-in-chief may determine.
>
> It is also further agreed that if the British government shall transport an excess of 150,000 men in June, such excess shall be infantry and machine gun units, and that early in June there shall be a new review of the situation to determine further action.

Military Situation Threatening.

As stated in a cable from the secretary of war, received May 12, this agreement provided less priority for infantry and machine-gun units than recommended by the supreme war council. It was certainly much more favorable to the ultimate formation of an American army than we had reason to expect, in view of the recommendations contained in Note 18 of the military representatives, which, as we have seen, had been practically approved by the president. In the excitement over our agreement with the British the full purport of this commitment was not emphasized by the Allies during the discussion.

Nobody more than I realized that the military situation was most threatening. Following the powerful enemy offensive of March 21 had come that of April 9, and another attack had been made by the enemy toward Amiens, while in the fighting farther east Villers-Bretonneux had been taken and retaken several times. As the British casualties since March 21 had been some 280,000, and those of the French 60,000 to 70,000, both Allies were prompted to make this strong appeal for Americans to reconstitute their units not only physically but morally.

From the practical standpoint of increasing the efficiency of the Allied armies the argument was against the unqualified acceptance of Allied proposals. The nationals of no country would willingly serve under a foreign flag in preference to their own. The national sentiment involved was such that we could not possibly afford to enter such an agreement, except in an extreme crisis.

Moreover, the added strength of a distinct army would be much greater than to have its personnel parceled out here and there. Another serious objection to our men serving in the Allied armies was the danger that the low morale and the pessimism in their ranks would react adversely on our officers and men; in fact, this had already been the case to some extent, especially among our men with the British, where the contacts had been close.

As to personal relations, it was gratifying always to find an attitude which apparently regarded these discussions, though often heated, as simply official differences of opinion. There was at the same time a very distinct impression in my mind, and in the minds of many of our officers familiar with the arguments on both sides, that the Allies, while greatly in need of assistance, were inclined to advance the plea for amalgamation as a means of keeping us in a subordinate role.

Still, after these questions were settled, even temporarily, there was no personal rancor or ill-feeling in evidence, although no doubt at times each side thought the other difficult to deal with.

Other proposals regarding the employment of American troops under Allied command were made from time to time, all of which I opposed vehemently. An understanding of the Allied attitude, however, enabled me to maintain the high regard in which I held my associates in arms, especially when their many acts of kindness and friendship were considered.

After the decision at Abbeville everybody seemed content, and General Foch, parting with me, said: "Mon general, nous sommes toujours d'accord." While this remark no doubt expressed satisfaction that an agreement had been reached, it did not mean the Allies had at all given up their views on how American troops should be trained or used.

As to training, the fact that neither the British nor French had trained their armies for open warfare, either offensive or defensive, was at least in part one cause of the tremendous success of the German drives with divisions trained expressly for that kind of warfare.

That the French intended to impress their conception on us is indicated by a memorandum of instructions for the guidance of their officers on duty with us emanating from the French general headquarters May 1 that fell into our hands. It shows also that the French still regarded the possibility of open warfare as more or less visionary. Speaking of Americans, it said:

> It should be borne in mind that they have an extremely highly developed sense of "Amour-propre" based on their pride in belonging to one of the greatest nations of the world. Consequently an air of superiority over them should be assiduously avoided, a fact which in no way prevents the absolute subordination required by the service for carrying out the rules of hierarchy. . . . In case of necessity French officers should not hesitate to exercise their authority. . . . Americans dream of operating in open country after having broken through the front. This results in too much attention being devoted to this form of operations.

Contrast With French Army in U. S.

The attitude the French assumed toward us in the World War was in marked contrast with the views held by them when their troops so generously came to America to aid us in the Revolution. The French commander at that time received very explicit instructions from his government on this subject, as the following sent to Rochambeau shortly before he sailed for America will show:

> It is his majesty's desire and he hereby commands that, so far as circumstances will permit, the Count de Rochambeau shall maintain the integrality of the French troops which his majesty has placed under his command, and that at the propert time he shall express to General Washington, commander-in-chief of the forces of the congress, under whose orders the French troops are to serve, that it is the intention of the king that these shall not be dispersed in any manner, and that they shall serve at all times as a unit and under the French generals, except in the case of a temporary detachment which shall rejoin the main body without delay.

After the sessions I suggested to M. Clemenceau and Mr. Lloyd George that sending a regiment might help to stimulate the Italian morale and asked their opinion. They both thought it would be a wise thing to do just at this time. I had opposed scattering our forces in this way, but the appeal of Italian officials and the recommendations of Americans who had visited Italy indicated that under the circumstances an exception could well be made for a small force.

When I told Premier Orlando that this might be done, with the possibility of increasing the number up to a division later on, he was much pleased. Meanwhile, the president had been pressed by Italian representatives to send them troops, and word came by cable a few days later that he thought we might brigade some of our troops with the British and French divisions then in Italy. But to leave them independent was far preferable, and the subject was not taken up with the Allies, my idea being that if we should find it necessary to send more troops to Italy it would be best to build up a division of our own.

Another matter taken up informally with the prime ministers after the conference was that of pooling Allied supplies. I explained its advantages and emphasized the saving in tonnage that would result. Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Orlando did not commit themselves entirely, but accepted it in principle, as M. Clemenceau had done, and each agreed to designate an officer with businss experience to meet with us at an early date to study the question.

With this beginning at least a step had been taken toward our objective, even though the principle might not be extended as far as we thought desirable. A few days later M. Clemenceau called a meeting in his office of the representatives, General Sir Travers Clark acting for the British and Colonel Charles G. Dawes for the Americans.

Tomorrow: British protest against our sending a negro division to serve with them.

Westminster Choir Concerts Noteworthy Musical Occasions

The current music season, noteworthy as it has been for the variety and excellence of its offerings, would have lacked a certain artistic completeness without the two concerts given by the Westminster a cappella choir Friday afternoon and evening in the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium.

These young, fresh voices succeeded in reviving another and an all-but-forgotten world of musical forms; a world whose beautiful complexities were all resolved, with what flawless, contrapuntal logic! in the simple and all-sufficing refrain "Hallelujah!" And yet it is not the logic of these vocal symphonies which convinces us. It is the grandeur and nobility of the feeling which breathes life and significance into every phrase. Sceptics may tear all the dogmas and the hypocritical professions of religion to shreds. But it is not so easy toppling Bach and Palestrina from their pedestals. One cannot refute an emotion.

And because these anthems, these archaic motets and chorales, with which we of 1931 have at bottom as little to do as with Hecuba, are emotionally as well as musically significant, they have remained alive, when we listen to them we are not merely taking an excursion into archaeology, we are genuinely and profoundly enjoying ourselves. If Bach's "Come, Jesus, Come!" could enthral the brain of the most intelligent musician that ever filled a score with pure, contrapuntal loveliness, it is more than likely to retain its power, even over those who can no longer experience the original emotion at first hand.

In order to afford listeners the greatest pleasure it is capable of producing, no doubt, the Westminster choir demands a background of Gothic arches and of twilit cathedral distances. But even in the small auditorium where it appeared Friday there were moments of perfect, almost orchestral beauty. That effect of sonorous tides receding, or flowing in a powerful crescendo, was certainly borrowed from an orchestra of predominating wood-winds, and bass violas. The voices blended as though they had been created expressly for each other, and under the direction of John Finley Williamson the chorus had that precision and cleanness which is so often missing, even in the work of a first-rate orchestra.

COMMITTEE APPROVES NAVAL STORES BILL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—The house agriculture committee today approved a senate bill to extend to producers of naval stores in southern states the benefits of the agricultural marketing act.

Chairman Haugen said there was opposition to the measure, but that a majority voted to report it favorably. The bill would make producers of gum, spirits of turpentine and rosin, in 13 southern states, eligible for federal farm board aid.

The committee substituted the senate measure, sponsored by Senator George, democrat, Georgia, for one by Representative Larsen, democrat, Georgia, in the house.

MUSIC CLUB DRIVE WILL CLOSE TODAY

Today marks the end of the membership campaign of the Atlanta Music Club, with headquarters at the Phillips & Crew store, and after the close of business today no more applications for membership will be received, it was stated Friday afternoon by Mrs. Walter H. Bedard, president of the club.

"Applications, with check, mailed tonight and reaching us Monday will be honored, however," said Mrs. Bedard. "We have heard from many who promised to call for membership cards but who have been unable to do so, and their checks by mail will serve just as well.

"While we desire to enroll 2,000 or more members, we set this one week for the public invitation and cannot extend it. Music lovers who do not respond now will be unable to hear any of the concerts next season, as no tickets will be sold.

"Those who join now, however, will be extended an invitation to hear the two remaining concerts of this season without charge. These will be the recital on March 12 of Manuel and Williamson, pianists, and the club's own chamber music recital in April."

The number and quality of the concerts to be presented next season will be controlled by the amount received from membership fees, and the more members enrolled this week, the larger the fund available. The fee of $5 for grownups and $2.50 for juniors and college students provides admission to all the concerts and other activities of the club. Memberships may be applied for by telephoning officers of the club at the Phillips & Crew store.

Tuesday's Lettings Will Bring Month's Total to $4,000,000.

Contracts for the construction of 24 miles of hard-surfaced road, for 6 1-2 miles of graded road, for 11 miles of grading and for 7 bridges will be let by the state highway board at the third February meeting next Tuesday, department officials announced Friday. The February 24 lettings, to aggregate between $500,000 and $1,000,000, will bring the month's total beyond $4,000,000.

The projects involved are:

6.5 miles of graded road, beginning at the Thomas county line and ending at Cairo, and two bridges in Grady county.

1.6 miles of grading and one bridge on the Sparta-Warrenton road, beginning at Jewell.

9.5 miles of grading, beginning at the Clarke county line and ending at Danielsville, and one bridge in Madison county.

Fashion Show Will Display Collection of Rare Jewels

When the brilliant Fashion and Beauty Extravaganza opens at the Paramount theater on Monday, the public will get its first glimpse of a magnificent collection of jewels brought here by a representative of Black, Starr & Frost-Gorham, Inc., of New York, for exhibition in the Fashion Show by Maier & Berkele-Gorham, Inc., who have chosen Miss Boyce Lokey, one of the loveliest and most regal beauties in the younger society contingent, to wear their colors in the extravaganza.

The piece de resistance of the collection is a superb ensemble including a gorgeous sautoir with brooch, earrings, bracelets and ring to match. The sautoir, which in everyday English is a sublime edition of necklace with pendant of surpassing importance, features 28 huge pearls and 543 diamonds of fancy cuts, including several rare half-moon diamonds. The pendant features three magnificent pearls—one black, one rose and one blue oriental. The drops of the earrings in size and color match perfectly, one featuring a black pearl and the other a rose pearl. The brooch is similarly executed, with baguet, trapeze, hexagon, pentagon and half-moon diamonds surrounding the pearls. The four-strand pearl bracelet has an exquisite clasp of fancy cut diamonds.

Other notable pieces in the collection to be shown during the Fashion Show are three platinum and diamond bracelets—one an inch and a quarter in width featuring three enormous marquise cut diamonds and twelve brilliant baguets. The bracelet is a remarkably fine piece of workmanship with open links, the stones set in pave style.

Another bracelet features three marvelous emerald cut diamonds surrounded with 33 baguets. The third bracelet is an exquisitely designed piece having nine marquise diamonds of rare fire and brilliance, with numerous baguets and half-moons in the detail.

Last, and perhaps most important to connoisseurs, is a dazzling emerald cut diamond of 14.79 carats set in a ring—a piece that a queen might covet. All told the collection is conservatively valued at $200,000 and needless to say these jewels will be guarded in a manner worthy of their magnificence and their intrinsic worth.

So it will be seen, the fashion and beauty extravaganza will be truly metropolitan, what with such jewels, what with the most alluring creations from the country's foremost salons chosen with a discerning eye by the experts of J. P. Allen & Company, and what with the most beautiful and graceful and charming of Atlanta's young girls and young matrons to wear those creations for the delectation of the public.

Included in the long and representative list of leading Atlanta merchants who are co-operating in the event that is sponsored by the Young Matrons circle as a benefit for Tallulah Falls school, are J. P. Allen & Company, Maier & Berkele-Gorham, Inc., Georgia Power Company, Nunnally's, George Muse Clothing Company, C. J. Kamper Grocery Company, Southern Business College, Capitol Electric Company, Atlanta Laundries, Inc., Duffie-Freeman Furniture Company, The Back Door Studio, Wofford Oil Company, Jacobs Pharmacy, Foremost Dairies, Anthony-Buick Company, Frosty Morning Shops, Dutch Oven Bakeries, Sinclair Merry-Go-Round Service, Kre-Mel and Dr. Pepper Bottling Company.

In addition to the fashion numbers, the extravaganza will present several delightful musical numbers featuring Charles Wynne, tenor. Virginia Semon and Leonard White are busy putting the finishing touches on some of the cleverest and smartest dance ensembles ever turned out by their highly successful studio, and they are sending into the revue their most talented pupils in solo and specialty dance numbers. Music for the show will be furnished by Tom Brannon and his orchestra.

The screen attractions that will complement the fashion, dance and musical revue are "Kismet," starring Otis Skinner, for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday; and "Viennese Nights," a charming musical comedy, booked for Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Tickets for this event are now on sale at the official headquarters of the Young Matrons' circle on the mezzanine of J. P. Allen's, where the sale will continue throughout all of next week. Tickets are 50 cents each, the regular evening scale at the Paramount theater. One half the proceeds of the advance sale comes to the Young Matrons' circle for Tallulah Falls school and the public is urged to procure tickets through members of that organization so that funds for the school may be increased.

Mrs. Bernard Neal, president of the circle, is general chairman of the fashion show and Mrs. Eugene Harrington is co-chairman.

BUTLER TO ASK LEAVE TO AID UNEMPLOYED

Fiery Marine Says He Will Seek Immediate Release From Duties.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Major General Smedly D. Butler announced today that he would ask the navy department for an immediate leave of absence so that he might help swell the funds for the relief of the unemployed.

The fiery commander of the marine corps said that he would accept invitations to speak at any place in any city where admission is charged and will turn over half of his earnings to the committee on unemployed in Philadelphia.

The general reached this decision today after a member of the committee had appealed to him to do something on behalf of those out of work. No sooner had he made his decision than he was asked to speak at a luncheon of the committee here next Wednesday. "Of course," he replied.

FLORIDA FARMER SHOT TO DEATH NEAR HOME

Will Peeples, 65, Found Dying by Son; Motive Is Unknown.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Feb. 20.—(AP)—The Jasper (Fla.) News wired here Friday that Will Peeples, 65, wealthy Hamilton county, Florida, farmer, was shot and killed Thursday night as he started to leave his garage. The farmer was struck by two loads of buckshot, one almost tearing away an arm and the other striking him in the chest. A son, hearing the shots, found his father dying. Officers said the firing came from within the garage.

Authorities said that robbery was not the motive since a large sum of money was found on Peeples.

Sheriff's officers formed a posse shortly after the shooting and spent the night seeking the slayer.

Devices Will Not Replace Newspapers, Institute Told

I am sure you will admit is a fact, involves at the same time a great responsibility and a great opportunity for the press and press associations.

"It is a great responsibility since you must have your feet firmly on the ground in determining what measures to support.

"If the blind lead the blind, both fall into the ditch.

"But it is also a great opportunity, a veritable challenge, since the future well-being of the state and of its citizens rests on the kind of wise and reasonable solution which is to be worked out for these problems.

"Dilatory and obstructionist tactics, or the insistence upon narrow, local, sectional or factional viewpoints even though it may mean a sacrifice for the whole state, may produce bitterness and ill feeling which will hinder these important reforms of yours.

"We have so seldom experienced the full therapeutic value of the power of the press because we do not often succeed in persuading this modern Hercules to use both right and left hand at the same task.

"This, also, is a part of the challenge which the present situation in Georgia offers to the Georgia Press Association."

Reviews Conditions.

Dr. Lutz, during the greater portion of his address, reviewed the conditions he found in the financial structure of the state during his survey, in which certain recommendations for what he said were needed reforms, were made by Dr. Lutz.

"There are many citizens in Georgia," Dr. Lutz said, "who have long appreciated the fact that your constitution is antiquated throughout, and that it is in no part more antiquated and unfitted for modern conditions than in the sections relative to revenue, public debt and financial administration."

He reviewed the sections he said were out of date and in need of changes.

"The constitution should not be a code of law," he said, "nor a book of regulations. Its purpose is to set forth, in clear, simple and concise language, the principles on which our democratic governments are built, and the underlying rights of the citizens which we have established these governments to protect and maintain. The practical operation of the governmental business should be relegated to the realm of statute law and the administrative orders and procedure of the officials who operate under the law."

HARRY F. HARRINGTON.

Referring to the state's revenue system he said that "in many places the Georgia revenue system has developed into a condition of maladjustment, inefficiency and inequality which was and is adverse to both state and local revenues.

"In the field of local government I found a condition which can only be described as chaotic. In the first place there are too many counties in Georgia. The number is 160, far more than any other state except Texas, which is more than four times as large, in terms of area.

"I suggested in my report, and I repeat here, that you must eventually plan for a thorough reorganization of your scheme of local government if you are to realize the maximum advantages from any plan of saving money for taxpayers.

"I have touched all too briefly upon some of the outstanding constitutional, statutory and administrative defects in the financial field.

"I am compelled to say, in all frankness, and I do say it in the most friendly spirit, that your conditions are bad, some of them extremely bad. If I were a doctor of medicine and had a patient in as serious physical condition as the state of Georgia is with respect to its financial system, I would advise a series of major operations.

Operations.

"This state must undergo a series of major operations. The proud flesh of antiquated revenue reforms and of obsolete administrative organization must be cut away. There must be a complete modernizing of these important financial features of your governmental system, if you are to expect any adequate recovery from the taxation ills under which you now suffer."

Dr. Lutz then took up the subject of remedial reforms for the conditions which he said existed in Georgia, which were covered in his report to Governor Hardman following the state survey.

The five points for immediate remedy, which he suggested in his report to the governor should be considered at a special session of the legislature, were:

1. Adoption of a definite plan for dealing with the deficit.
2. The enactment of a state tax commission act.
3. Enactment of an executive budget act.
4. Revision of income, gross receipts and general tax acts.
5. Submission of a constitutional amendment authorizing the classification of property for taxation.

Dr. Lutz told the press institute that he opposed the discounting of Western & Atlantic railroad rentals because he deemed it "expensive" and "ill advised," because of the money the state would lose in discounting now. Reduction of the highway appropriations for 1931 for an amount sufficient to meet the deficit was the way he suggested to the governor that the deficit be met.

Mr. Harrington said that "no matter how fast the development and standardization of the radio, the talking picture or television, these mechanical devices never will be able to duplicate the peculiar, localized service rendered by the newspaper.

That is the opinion of Harry Franklin Harrington, director of the Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern University, as expressed in his address before the Georgia Press Institute here today. Mr. Harrington spoke on "The Human Newspaper."

"The newspaper originated in the need of busy men and women for complete information and interpretation, rooted in the interesting events of the day, as discovered, sifted and organized by a guild of trained observers and commentators," he said, "when this appetite for fresh morsels of news disappears, the newspaper itself will find its way into a museum as a discarded relic of a forgotten era."

"But," continued Mr. Harrington, "as long as babies are born into the world and women given in marriage, and men carry on the job of making a living, so long will the newspaper continue to be the mirror in which the activities of the human race find their reflection.

"Into the ink and the paper there moves a mysterious presence, fashioned of heart and mind and spirit, that gives a paper that intimate human quality so richly prized, so frequently absent in other products.

"'Untouched by human hands'—that proud boast of a machine civilization which turns out doughnuts and automobiles with equal dispatch—will never be true of any newspaper worthy of its high calling.

"The chief glory of journalism is that it has always been conducted by human beings for the benefit of other human beings. It resists the mark of the stencil and the stamp of the machine. It has always been intensely personal, eager and content to picture the life of its own particular parish.

"If there had been a weekly gazette in the Garden of Eden, it would probably have carried a lively editorial page with Adam as editor and proprietor appearing at the masthead, and with Eve represented as a writer of special feature stories, possibly on the habits of livestock and the flavor of wild apples.

"Indeed, I sometimes wonder if there is not some justification for supposing that Job was a country publisher. Certainly that resolute Old Testament character was the most patient of workmen and no one can say that he didn't run his own business. His epitaph might well read, Job, Printer."

Dr. Harrington said the supreme challenge to the modern newspaper, pressed on every side by standardization and formula, is to hold and strengthen those fine human qualities that have given it distinction and power in the past.

"The wise community editor," he said, "will resist the temptation to convert his paper into a lurid copy of some sensational billboard, and instead engraft into its making his own ideas, conviction and craftsmanship, so that his paper becomes local, personal, pungently individual, in fact a superior hand-made job.

"The wise reporter will cease imitating the antics of the syndicated wisecrackers and the widely advertised literary showman, and devote his skill and energy to painstaking, accurate reporting of the news thriving in his own neighborhood.

"The wise reader will give thoughtful attention to his own local newspaper, and applaud its every effort to abolish ugliness, breed a respect for law, and keep the town moving forward."

Dean Sanford Speaks.

A hopeful sign for higher ideals and a higher quality of education is the tendency to stop begging funds "for our institutions from foundations maintained by millionaires and to rely more and more upon an educated constituency that really appreciate learning," Dean S. V. Sanford, of the University of Georgia, told the institute at the Atlanta Journal luncheon.

Dean Sanford spoke on "Our Changing Education." He declared that "our institutions should be free and for that reason should depend at all times upon public funds and not upon benefactions," and stressed the importance of aiming for quality instead of quantity in education.

"We are beginning to learn," said the dean, "that education is not a charity, but a part of our national defense.

"Within the past 30 years there has been a great revolution in education in this country, with the result that American universities have changed from purely intellectual agencies to great socializing agencies."

Characterizing the period prior to the passage of the Morrill act in 1862, whereby federal funds became available for vocational and technical education and the application of the physical sciences to industry, as the "golden age of snobbery," Dean Sanford pointed out that "the classical degree of that era, available for few, has been superseded by a curriculum which has made education a thing for the masses instead of the classes.

"Social and economic conditions in this country have made the American educational system different from that of England, France, Germany," he said. "The growth of state universities has been one of the amazing facts of higher education in America. A free institution in a free country supported and numbered by a free people is the crowning glory of our civilization.

"As industry, commerce and the social life are undergoing marked changes, so the curriculum of our institutions is reflecting life as it is being lived. This situation is inevitable so long as society by legal enactments requires additional services of the institutions in its process of preparing each generation for life.

"This cannot be helped, for the day of primitive civilization has passed and we must prepare our boys and girls for life in this complex civilization and our institutions must keep pace with progress and reflect the changes and developments in the social order."

Round Table Conferences.

Round table conferences on various phases of newspaper technique occupied the afternoon program. The following teachers of journalism in Georgia colleges were on the program: Professors John E. Drewry and Edwards C. Crouse, of the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism, University of Georgia; Miss Virginia Garner, Wesleyan College; Professor Raymond B. Nixon, Emory University, and Mrs. Willie Snow Ethridge, Mercer University. Professor Drewry presided.

The importance of accurate observation and adequate description was emphasized by Mrs. Ethridge. She discussed various types of feature articles, including the personality sketch, confession article, and the "how to do something" types.

Miss Garner, discussing editorial writing, deplored the absence of local editorials in the Georgia press. She said that a recent study of 75 papers revealed that only a small percentage devoted any considerable amount of space to local editorials, which she characterized as the "backbone of the newspaper."

Professor Nixon explained the necessity of a complete summary in the first part of every good news story. He explained the difference between the news story and other forms of prose writing. Past and present tendencies in newspaper typography were described by Mr. Crouse, who contrasted the modern trend of harmony in type faces and the use of upper and lower case instead of all capital headlines to increase legibility.

"The use of one type face, and one alone, regardless of what it may be, insures beauty and attractiveness in the newspaper page. Monotony is avoided by employing italic and varying sizes for contrast," he pointed out. "Legibility is most readily attained by discarding all capital headlines and substituting those set in capitals and lower case."

Saturday's sessions will be presided over by Jack Williams, editor of the Waycross Journal-Herald. Claude G. Bowers, editorial writer for the New York Evening World and noted democrat, will be principal speaker. The Atlanta Constitution will entertain the institute at luncheon tomorrow, with Major Clark Howell, Jr., business manager of The Constitution, presiding.

Mr. Bowers, the keynote speaker at the last democratic national convention, will be presented by Major John S. Cohen, editor and president of the Atlanta Journal, and national democratic committeeman from Georgia. Major Cohen will be presented by Chancellor C. M. Snelling, of the University of Georgia. Mr. Bowers and Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, will be honor guests at the luncheon given by The Atlanta Constitution.

ATLANTA DEBATERS WIN IN VALDOSTA

"Adoption of Free Trade Policy by All Nations" Defeated.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Feb. 20.—Students representing the freshman class of Emory University, Atlanta, defeated freshmen of Emory Junior College at Valdosta in debate here Friday night by a decision of 2 to 1.

The subject debated was: "Resolved, that the nations of the world should adopt a policy of free trade," with Valdosta on the affirmative and Atlanta on the negative side.

Those from Atlanta speaking against the resolution were Ben Anderson and W. R. Purdue. Those upholding the affirmative were M. Y. Blum, Jr., and Ewell Clark, Valdosta.

The judges were Dr. B. G. Owens, State Senator-elect E. E. Dekle and George E. Simpson.

Dr. Ida Bengston, noted woman scientist, is shown above with Dr. E. C. Underwood, injecting into the eyes of a monkey secretions from persons suffering from trachoma. Dr. Bengston, in the experiment, hopes to discover the cause of the disease.

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., Feb. 20.—A group of scientists today saw at first hand the effect of trachoma, disease of the eye, and through 30 patients began intensive search to determine what germ, if any, causes the affliction.

The patients tonight were in Bainbridge hospital preparatory to operations to be performed tomorrow. More than 200 persons reported at the clinic today for examination.

The clinic was established for Decatur and Mitchell counties under auspices of the United States public health service. Dr. Ida Bengston, leader in the search, is assisted by a surgeon and two assistants from the National Institute of Health, Rolla, Mo. Dr. Bengston said she had been seeking the cause of trachoma five years and that the question had irked medical men for centuries.

A menagerie of young animals is being used in the experimental work. Horses and rabbits are used to furnish blood for culture media, in which bacteria are cultivated. Monkeys and guinea pigs serve to test the effects of various bacteria.

Secretions from the eyes of persons suffering from the disease are planted in various culture media and these are allowed to remain in the incubator for several days, after which the tubes and plates holding the cultures are removed and examined for growth.

Dr. E. C. Rice, surgeon here for the operations, said "trachoma is a preventable and a communicable disease." He compared it with leprosy, saying "that by continually insulting nature against cleanliness one would gradually fall a victim to the eye disease causing blindness." He said trachoma had been prevalent in Kentucky and Tennessee for 100 years and that $300,000 annually is paid in Missouri to the trachoma blind as pensions.

Dr. John McMullen, a native Georgian, held a clinic at Pelham, Ga., 25 years ago and today, grandchildren of some of his patients whose sight was restored were in the clinic today.

Medical authorities said the situation in this immediate section is not serious, but there was sufficient number of cases to warrant efforts to check the spread of the disease.

Active work against the disease will be carried on here for several months, it was announced, and, while Dr. Bengston and other bacteriologists and surgeons will not remain throughout this period, a nurse of the health service will be in charge. The next clinic is to be held March 7 in the Decatur county courthouse.

Mitchell county patients will be in charge of Dr. Carl Welch, Bainbridge, surgeon, and the Bainbridge hospital will be used for operative cases for probably the first three months and then the cots, bedding and other government-furnished equipment will be moved to Riverside hospital for operations. The clinic has attracted considerable interest throughout this section, visitors coming here for examination from all parts of southwest Georgia.

OLDER BOYS OPEN SESSION IN ATHENS

Abit Nix Is Principal Speaker on First Day's Program.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 20.—"The future of the state and country lies in the hands of the youth of today. It is up to them whether the world will progress or stagnate," Abit Nix, prominent Athens attorney, told members of the Georgia Older Boys Y. M. C. A. conference here Friday night at the opening session.

The conference, attended by 300 boys from practically every section of the state, began with an elaborate program at the Athens Y. M. C. A. Addresses will be made by Professor John T. Wheeler, of the state college of agriculture, Saturday afternoon, and Sunday morning at Sunday school and preaching hour the boys will hear Fred T. Barnett, associate secretary of the southern Methodist hospital board.

Mr. Nix urged the youth of today to carry on where their forefathers left off.

He stressed the past contributions to progress by youth and pleaded for furtherance of the development of the ideals of government, science, letters, and religion.

He paid tribute to Lindbergh and Admiral Byrd.

WOMAN SHOOTS SELF IN SUICIDE ATTEMPT

QUITMAN, Ga., Feb. 20.—(AP)—Miss Avada Aycock, 40, Friday night was undergoing treatment for gunshot wounds she told friends were self-inflicted.

"All that I am sorry about," she said, "is that I am not dead." Surgeons said that despite an ugly wound in her forehead she probably would recover.

She was found in her cotton mill village home by neighbors who heard the shot, and who said she had been in ill health for some time.

UNDERWOOD SURE OF CONFIRMATION

Opposition Collapses When Foes Fail To Appear at Hearing.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—All doubt in regard to the confirmation of E. Marvin Underwood to be judge of the Georgia northern district court was dissipated today when the subcommittee headed by Senator Felix Hebert of Rhode Island held a hearing on the subject. Not a single person was present to testify against Mr. Underwood and the hearing, which was executive, resolved itself into a pleasant little chat between the nominee and the three senators on the subcommittee.

One of the protestants could not even be located, a second replied that the telegram sent was sufficient, while the third wired that he was unable to appear on account of illness. Since there was no specific complaint, all the charges being general in character, the only thing the sub-committee could do was to disregard them. On the other hand the supporters of the nominees were profuse in extolling Mr. Underwood's ability, integrity and fitness for the position.

It is expected that a favorable report will be submitted to the senate either tomorrow or Monday and that confirmation will follow as the natural result.

Senator Hebert said protests had been received from S. G. Walker, Atlanta; Hallie L. Crutchfield, Rome, Ga.; T. J. Lummox, Atlanta, and Mrs. J. E. Andrews, Atlanta.

Walker notified the committee that he would be unable to attend the hearing because of injuries received in an automobile accident.

No reply was received from invitations sent to the others to attend the hearing to press their charges.

Underwood was asked to make a statement in the course of which he was questioned by Senators Hebert and Dill, democrat, Washington, concerning the charges that had been made in the communications received.

An "Independent Democrat."

In reply Underwood testified that he was an "independent democrat" and voted for President Hoover in the last election and for the democratic presidential candidates at the two previous elections. He said he had never been active in any political campaign as a prohibitionist but that his activities had been in behalf of the cause of prohibition.

As to the race question and his activities in that connection he said he "had joined an organized effort to try to better race relations by bringing together the best elements of the two races with a view to reducing friction, preventing lynching, assuring the negro greater justice in the courts, better educational opportunities and civic improvement."

Underwood also told the committee that he had never had any difficulties with organized labor and refuted the charge that he had had no courthouse experience by saying he had argued 15 or 20 cases before the United States supreme court when he was an assistant attorney general. He said he had had no recent intimate connections with power or railroad interests.

No Part in 1928 Campaign.

Underwood testified he had taken "no part in the 1928 political campaign except to vote."

He also said he received no money reward for his efforts to improve inter-racial conditions but, on the contrary, spent of his own money in that cause.

Both of Georgia's senators, George and Harris, spoke highly of Underwood's character and qualifications and recommended his confirmation.

"These charges don't amount to anything," said Senator Harris. "I don't think they should be given serious consideration."

Local School Dental Activity Ranks High

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Atlanta ranked fourth in dental protective examinations given children under six years of age among 36 cities in the country with more than 225,000 population, according to a statement made public today by the White House conference on child health. It was only exceeded in this regard by Kansas City, Newark, N. J., and San Francisco.

Four subjects are taken up in the report, the Atlanta figures being as follows: 52 per cent of the children in the category mentioned have been given health examinations; 21 per cent have had their teeth examined when there was no dental complaint; 18 per cent have been vaccinated and 17 per cent immunized against diphtheria.

TENNESSEE ROAD OFFICIALS DODGE

BY RALPH WHEATLEY.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 20.—(AP) Under the burning light of the investigation by the state affairs legislative committee, Highway Commissioner Robert H. Baker and State Treasurer John F. Nolan jumped out from the responsibility for a bundle of highway withdrawal checks for nearly $5,000,000 that bounced about Capitol Hill for eight days last October.

Each claimed they should not be blamed for having more than $4,000,000 of the state's money presently caught in the crash of four banks in which Rogers Caldwell, ex-financial lord, and Colonel Luke Lea, publisher and political leader, were interested.

Colonel Lea, accused yesterday of check kiting operations at the closed Liberty Bank & Trust Company, Nashville, in testimony given the committee, today issued a formal statement saying that while his account at the bank was active "every cash item deposited was paid in full."

From the witness stand today Commissioner Baker testified that at a conference at the home of Colonel Lea last October with Treasurer Nolan present, he insisted that highway funds be redistributed in the banks after the republican candidate for governor had demanded a statement of state fund deposits. He said both Colonel Lea and Mr. Nolan agreed that funds should be reduced in some of the institutions, including the Lea-Caldwell institutions.

The next day, October 20, he said, he summoned G. H. Briley, chief accountant, to his office and told him to draw 96 checks to the state treasurer for delivery to Mr. Nolan, who would receipt them. Accordingly, he said, these checks were drawn:

Eleven on the Bank of Tennessee totaling $2,633,200; 32 on the Holston-Union National bank, Knoxville, for $1,391,102.76; two on the Holston Trust Company, Knoxville, for $197,879.60; seven on the Liberty Bank & Trust Company, Nashville, for $237,721.77; seven on the Tennessee-Hermitage National bank, of Nashville, for $274,425, and 37 on the Union-Planters' National bank, Memphis, for $127,300, making a total of $4,861,629.13.

"It should be noted," Mr. Baker said, "that 52 of these checks, totaling $4,459,904 were drawn to the treasurer from the Bank of Tennessee, the Holston Union National bank, the Holston Trust Company and the Liberty Bank & Trust Co., which banks are now in the process of liquidation, with the result that this amount of state funds is unavailable."

The witness declared that when about half of the checks were drawn, he sent Mr. Briley with the checks to Mr. Nolan. Briley returned, however, he said, with the explanation that Nolan refused to accept them. He then called the treasurer, the commissioner said, and Nolan told him that he had not agreed to accept them.

"I did not argue the matter with him but called Colonel Luke Lea in order to get from him his understanding of the agreement which had been made the night before," Baker's statement said. Colonel Lea stated to me that Mr. Nolan had agreed on the previous night to take these checks and redeposit the amounts involved to the credit of the state treasurer. In the meantime, all checks were completed and signed and delivered to me, and I was holding them, expecting to have the treasurer accept them for redeposit.

"On either October 21 or October 22, I had Mr. Briley see Mr. Nolan again, urging him to accept the transfer of funds which we were making back to him. Mr. Nolan again refused, and on Mr. Briley's return to my office he advised me that Mr. Nolan had stated that he could not, under the law, hold these checks more than three days, which was the first time, in so far as I know, that it was anticipated by any one that these checks would be held and not deposited in the regular way. Mr. Nolan again refused to accept the checks and on October 28 they were cancelled."

Lea Statement.

Colonel Lea's statement in full follows:

"The animus of Mr. Chappell's testimony before the state probe committee was as much without any foundation in fact as his hearsay testimony against me.

"Mr. Chappell's reduction in salary attributed by him to me was not caused by me. It was not even known by me until I read his testimony in the paper.

"Naturally, I knew nothing about the amount or reduction of Mr. Chappell's salary because I was not an officer, director nor connected in any way with the management of the Liberty Bank & Trust Company. I had an interest in approximately 125 shares of its stock, owned by the late R. E. Donnell.

"While my account at the Liberty Bank & Trust Company was very active and the amounts handled through it totaled large figures, every cash item deposited was paid in full. Interest and exchange on the same were always charged and paid when properly chargeable.

"No loan nor accommodation was ever granted to me on account of any deposit of public funds.

"The certificates of deposit in the Central Bank & Trust Company, sold to the Liberty Bank & Trust Company, were legally issued in every way. That they were regarded as good at the date of their sale and later is attested by the fact that fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars was obtained upon fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars of the face value of these certificates, by the Liberty Bank & Trust Company, from other banks, to-wit: Twenty thousands ($20,000) dollars from the Hamilton National Bank of Chattanooga; ten thousand ($10,000) dollars from the National Bank of Kentucky and twenty thousand ($20,000) dollars from the Fourth and First National Bank of Nashville.

"The fact that during one of the most acute panics in history, the Central Bank & Trust Company was unwilling to anticipate by more than 60 days the payment of these certificates cannot in any way justify Mr. Chappell's conclusions in regard to them or his threats to Mr. Davis if payment was not thus anticipated.

"Mr. Wallace B. Davis, then president of the Central Bank & Trust Company, in a letter to Mr. C. M. Preston, vice president of the Hamilton National Bank, under date of November 10, 1930, stated the certificates of deposit were regularly issued, saying,

"'All of the above (referring to certificates held by the Liberty Bank and Trust Company) certificates are regular and there are no conditions thereto, except those mentioned on the face of said certificates'."

Enthusiasm over the business outlook for the aviation industry, which has been in the slough of despond for many months, was expressed Friday by Gus Leazar, Atlanta base manager for the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service, upon his return from St. Louis, where he attended a meeting of all base managers of the service. Leazar stated that reports made at the convention from managers in all parts of the country indicated that things are "opening up" to a gratifying degree and that airplane dealers and aviation operators in general may expect a considerable increase over their 1930 business.

Leazar flew back to Atlanta in a 300-horsepower Cessna with Carl E. Voelter, base manager at Miami; J. R. Waters, base manager at Columbia, S. C., and F. J. Sullivan, treasurer of the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service. Sullivan, who felt that the optimism expressed at the St. Louis meeting entitled him to a vacation, will fly to Miami this morning in the Cessna, with Voelter and Waters. Leazar was highly pleased with the new Curtiss-Wright models, which were tested by the managers between business sessions. These include a new Gipsy-powered Travel Air trainer and an even newer sport job, a smaller edition of the J-6 Speedwing, equipped with a 110-horsepower Warner "Scarab" and a N. A. C. A. cowling. The Curtiss-Wright "Junior," tiny pusher, is being turned out at the rate of one every other day, Leazar reported.

Brigadier General Lucius R. Holbrook, commander of the first field artillery division, at Governor's Island, New York, and former commandant at Fort Bragg, N. C., landed at Candler Field Friday afternoon on a tour of army posts in the south. He was the guest of Major General Frank R. McCoy, commanding officer of the fourth corps area, at Fort McPherson Friday night.

General Holbrook left Tampa Friday morning in a Wasp-powered Thomas Morse, army observation plane, with Lieutenant R. J. French, of Maxwell Field, as his pilot, and visited the Montgomery base and Fort Benning on the way to Atlanta. Lieutenant P. E. Skanse, commanding officer, of Pope field, Fort Bragg, arrived at the local airport in another Thomas-Morse Friday afternoon and this morning will fly the general as far north as the Carolina field. At that point another army plane will be available for the remainder of the flight to Governor's Island.

Mrs. A. R. Seaman, of Wieuca road, one of this section's most enthusiastic followers of aviation, Thursday became Atlanta's fourth "airwoman," successfully negotiating her initial solo flight after instruction from Beeler Blevins and E. W. Hightower, of the Blevins Aicraft Corporation. Mrs. Seaman, who owned a Waco "10" which was destroyed in the Blevins hangar fire last year and who plans to buy another ship in the not too distant future, took her feat pretty much as a matter of course. Confident of her ability, she said she experienced no nervousness before or during the hop. Other Atlanta women who have soloed are Mrs. Ruth Mohr, Mrs. Floyd McRae and Miss Gladys Poole, who now lives in Miami.

J. L. Phillips, who is connected with a local jewelry concern and who also has taken the Blevins flight training course, soloed a few minutes before Mrs. Seaman took off alone for the first time. Phillips' wife, waiting for him in their car, was not aware of her husband's achievement until he taxied back to the hangar alone, his face wreathed with smiles.

The first unit of Candler field's new and larger flying equipment, made necessary by the airport's constantly increasing traffic, landed here Friday afternoon. The plane, a Pitcairn PA-8, 300-horsepower mail plane, capable of carrying a cargo of about 1,000 pounds, was ferried here from Richmond by Dick Merrill, Eastern Air Transport, Inc., mail pilot, and will be put into service as a reserve ship, for use when particularly heavy cargoes await transmission to the east. Another PA-8 now is at the Richmond field and a third soon will be delivered by the factory. The new job is a larger edition of the PA-7, the Mailwing, with many of the latter's design characteristics. The mail compartment is more commodious, of course, and the pilot's cockpit much farther back than in the present machine.

Lieutenant Raymond R. Brown, air officer of the fourth corps area, will land at Candler field late this afternoon in a new Douglas BT2B, a Wasp-powered training plane, which will complete the equipment of the local air corps reserve outfit. Lieutenant Brown left for Santa Monica, Cal., about a week ago, flying as far as Kelly field in a Curtiss Falcon and continuing the journey to the Douglas factory by train. He was in Houston Friday night and will resume the flight this morning. He is accompanied by Master Sergeant William J. Long, an Atlanta boy, who is connected with the local reserve unit.

Three visiting planes landed at Candler field Friday. These included Lee Smith, Stinson's southern sales manager, flying a Lycoming Stinson. He came here from Tampa and was accompanied by Captain A. B. McMullen, widely known Florida flyer and former operator at the Atlanta airport. Smith reported that he sold four Stinsons during his month's tour of Florida. He stored his plane at the Blevins Aircraft Corporation hangar.

B. F. Stegall, flying a J-6 Travel Air biplane from Savannah, and Clayton Bessell and Chester A. Snow, flying a Pitcairn PA-7 from Washington to Miami, stored their ships for the night in the Curtiss-Wright hangar.

Air mail operators Friday were instructed by Postmaster General Brown to increase the speed of their planes from an average of 102 miles an hour to 150, the order coming at the concluding session of a conference with the operators to devise ways of improving the service and decreasing the cost. The operators and the postoffice department also reached an agreement on a new rate formula. The department did not make it public but issued a statement to the effect that it would materially increase daily mileage flown, giving added service and schedules, for the same amount of money. More uniform standard of passenger rates, now ranging from 4 to 13 cents a mile, was urged by the postmaster-general.

Speeding up air mail schedules to 150 miles an hour would be a splendid move for users of the service and undoubtedly would result in greatly increased patronage of the facilities offered by air mail operators. Under the 102-mile schedule, a flight of 775 miles (the approximate distance between Atlanta and New York) requires about seven and a half hours; at an average of 150 miles an hour the journey would be completed in a few minutes more than five hours. It will mean, however, that every airmail operator will have to dispose of his present comparatively slow equipment and buy faster machines.

BARTON'S AD FIRM STARTED IN ATLANTA

A telegram sent to Buffalo, N. Y., from Atlanta, during the World War, was the tiny seed from which later was to grow one of the largest advertising agencies in the nation. This curious and somewhat romantic fact was disclosed Friday night at the Biltmore hotel by Bruce Barton, nationally known writer and advertising executive, who is paying a brief visit to the city.

The firm whose destiny, in its early stages, was so closely wrapped up with Atlanta, is that of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn. It was a wire addressed to Mr. Osborn, inviting him to assist Mr. Barton in his work as publicity director of the United War Work campaign, which caused the two men to become friends and later to form their partnership in the agency of which Mr. Barton is at present chairman of the board.

Neither Knew the Other.

The strangest part was that the two men knew nothing of each other before the wire was sent, someone having casually suggested Mr. Osborn's name to Mr. Barton in the course of a train ride from New Orleans to Atlanta. That fateful telegram was the result.

"By Bruce Barton." Magazine readers, familiar with this name, frequenters of book-shops, who have observed it on the fly-leaves of many volumes, some of which they have perhaps purchased, and taken home with them, probably will not recognize the businessman and the author as being one and the same person. But that is precisely the state of the case, the businessman even taking precedence of the author in Mr. Barton's estimation. His writing he considers a sideline, although, he hastens to add, it is the most absorbing and delightful sideline that a man can possibly cultivate.

But business is even more absorbing, and Mr. Barton could never endure the life of a mere spectator while such a game was being played. He loves it for its own sake, too, for he could earn his living just as well, perhaps, and a great deal less strenuously by retiring and devoting himself to the typewriter.

Loves Advertising Best.

And out of all the different ways of playing the game of business he loves advertising best. "It has raised the tone of business everywhere and placed it on a higher ethical level," he says. And, despite the fact that his firm, according to Mr. Barton, has placed more radio advertising than any other agency in the country, the most effective medium of reaching the people he maintains, is the newspaper. "Only 20 per cent of the people are 'ear-minded', according to psychologists, the other 80 per cent are 'eye-minded', and the newspaper comes within the range of more people's vision than any other medium," Mr. Barton pointed out.

Born in Tennessee, the son of a Congregational missionary, Mr. Barton would be taken for a southerner almost anywhere, regardless of the fact that he has spent the greater part of his life in the north. He was guest of honor at a dinner given by the Ten Club in the Biltmore Friday night. And at 8:30 o'clock this morning he is to be the guest of E. E. Dallis at breakfast. "Bobby" Jones and several other notables will be among those present.

HURT BY AUTOMOBILE, C. W. KROEG, 71, DIES

C. W. Kroeg, Sr., 71, of 1059 Oak street, died at Grady hospital early Friday night as the result of injuries received Monday night at Luckie and Harris streets, when according to police reports, he walked into the side of an automobile.

The car, according to the police report, was driven by A. H. Butler, 201 Atlanta avenue, S. E., who took the injured man to Grady, where an examination disclosed a fractured skull and a broken left leg.

Butler later posted a $1,000 bond at police station on a charge of reckless driving. His case is set for hearing in recorder's court on February 24, before Judge A. W. Calloway.

Mr. Kroeg is survived by one son, C. W. Kroeg, Jr., a daughter, Mrs. G. W. Brownlee; a brother, Albert Kroeg, and one sister, Miss Emma Kroeg, all of Atlanta. Funeral arrangements will be announced later by J. Austin Dillon.

TENNESSEE CASHIER ARRESTED AS FORGER

CARTHAGE, Tenn., Feb. 20.—(AP) Magistrate H. H. White announced here today the arrest of Robert P. East, cashier of the People's Bank of Dixon Springs, on charges of forgery and misappropriation of bank funds.

The magistrate said East's peculations which he said were alleged to have approximated from $50,000 to $60,000, were responsible for the bank's failure February 11. White said East, aged 35, already faced a charge of embezzlement in connection with the bank's failure.

Chaplin's 'Quiet Stroll' Turns Into Celebration

LONDON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Charlie Chaplin slipped out a side door of his hotel today and set off down Pall Mall for a quiet walk, incognito so to speak.

Before he had gone 50 yards a street sweeper spied him, flung his hat in the air and cried, "Wot cheer, Charlie old boy." Instinctively Chaplin waved back and in a moment he was the center of a crowd in the middle of Trafalgar square. He escaped in a taxicab.

REVOLTS FLARE IN 2 COUNTRIES

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Armed troubles broke out in two countries of South America, Peru and Paraguay, today and in Argentina it was reported that authorities had nipped in the bud a plot to overthrow the government of President Uriburu.

The Peruvian revolt, aimed at Provisional President Sanchez Cerro, was quelled after fighting in Callao in which 60 or more persons, including one American killed by a stray bullet, lost their lives.

Lack of communications made it impossible to determine just what had taken place at Villa Encarnacion, Paraguay, where insurgents were reported to have seized the city, occupied public buildings and cut telegraph and telephone lines.

Dispatches to the Newspaper La Nacion, at Buenos Aires tonight, however, indicated that the rising was one of communistic tendencies, and was localized. Authorities at Rosadas, Argentina, across the Parana river from Villa Encarnacion were taking precautions against spread of the trouble into Argentine territory.

At Buenos Aires it was reported a number of army officers had been arrested for an alleged revolutionary plot which was to have matured last Monday, but was discovered and frustrated. The leader of the revolt was said to have fled the country.

Miss Sara Tate, English department: May my sentence be a question? When we crumble, how can we make the cornbread stay on the knife?

KANSAS GOVERNOR PREFERS CRACKLINGS

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 20.—(AP)—Another state was heard from today in the squabble between dunkers and non-dunkers.

Governor Harry H. Woodring said he would provide crackling cornpone, hog jowl and poke greens for Governor W. H. Murray of Oklahoma when "Alfalfa Bill" comes to Topeka next Monday to address Kansas democrats gathered for their Washington Day dinner.

"It's up to Governor Murray to dunk or not to dunk," the governor said, as he announced preparation to have plenty of potlikker on hand for a luncheon at which the Oklahoma executive would be the guest of honor. He fell into the praise of cornpone made with fat cracklings.

"And unless we get some tax relief in Kansas pretty soon," he said, "everyone will be eating cornpone just that way."

MARINES OF ATLANTA CRUMBLE TO VICTORY

By a slim majority of 1, the marine corps "crumblers" won over the "dunkers" in The Constitution cornpone war. Sergeant Hayes cast the deciding vote on the side of the "crumblers." It was a close battle from the start.

Sergeant C. R. Baumgras, after being informed that "johnnie cake" and "cornpone" are brothers under the crust, joined in the contest with all the gusto and smacking of the lips possible for a native New Yorker. The ballot was taken at the local marine corps recruiting station at 79 1-2 Forsyth street, and ended with five men asking for a leave of absence. It is not known whether they mean to carry the contest further, or that they have decided to return home for pot and other liquor.

EXPERTS IN VIRGINIA SOAK THEIR PONES

Now comes a suggestion from the Old Dominion state on the "sanitary" way to exterminate potlikker and cornpone.

T. E. Connell, of the Connell-Smith Plumbing Company, of Atlanta, telephoned in Friday to say that in Virginia they are pretty well agreed that the cornpone should be neither dunked nor crumbled, all other authorities to the contrary.

"My wife is from Virginia and I have visited there, also," Mr. Connell said. "There the cornpone is put into a bowl or platter and the potlikker is poured over it. The other ways just are not sanitary. We feel that we can more than back up our contention and offer the whole state of Virginia as references."

U. D. C. MEMBER SAYS THAT CRUMBLING IS O. K.

Mrs. T. N. Abernathy, of 355 Bryant street, S. E., traces crumbling back to days "befo' de wah." In a rhyming letter to The Constitution's Potlikker and Cornpone Editor, Mrs. Abernathy says:

"Hurrah for the crumblers of ante-bellum fame! Dear to our hearts is this traditional name. We know nothing of 'dunking' cornpone into potlikker, but still hold to crumbling as our palate's best tickler. In fair Dixie land where corn waves and collards grow, crumbled cornpone into potlikker inevitably must go."

GOVERNOR AND EDITOR BOTH REAP REWARDS

A. D. Bordeaux, general sales manager, Widlar Pickle Company, Wiggins, Miss., next-door neighbor to Governor Long, has this to say:

"I am glad that there is something on the front page besides congress and the depression. I think the cornpone and potlikker discussion is a fine thing. D. M. Luce, a friend of mine, of Lucedale, Miss., is sending Governor Long half a dozen cans of potlikker from his turnip green farm, and also will send the Cornpone and Potlikker Editor of The Constitution a similar contribution to the potlikker war."

REMOVAL OF BARN CHARGED TO NEGRO

Criminal court of Atlanta will pass on a charge of malicious mischief against Milledge Green, negro, it was decided Friday by Recorder John Cone, of police court. Green is charged with removing, piece by piece, a barn from the rear of the property at 195 Merritts avenue.

Cross Sections of Life In Gate City of South

Former Governor Clifford Walker will speak to the Wesley Bible class of the Peachtree Road Methodist church at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning.

Protestant services will be conducted by Chaplain Joseph O. Ensrud in the Fort McPherson chapel at 11 o'clock Sunday morning. Music is under the direction of Captain Theodore M. Cornell, with Mrs. Cornell at the pipe organ.

Miss Daisy Davies, of the Methodist Woman's Missionary Society, will speak at the Park Street Methodist church at 7:30 o'clock Monday night. The public is invited.

Miss Martha Jane Rountree, 644 Linwood avenue, this week for the second time in her life held the bridge hand that seldom comes to a person once in a lifetime. Miss Rountree's hand was composed of 13 hearts, on which she raised the bids to seven hearts. Other players were Miss Blanche Smith, Miss Vashti Parker and Miss Thelma Brantley.

Pie slinging may mean S. R. O. to a movie, but it's just another juvenile riot to Chief of Police James L. Beavers. In an order issued Friday, Chief Beavers directed that police protect the owner of a lunch stand on Pearce street from boys who have been taking his pies and hurling them at each other.

Dr. Bert E. Smith, of Chicago; Dr. Darnell Tippett, of New York, and Dr. W. L. McDowell, of Philadelphia, will speak and Bishop F. T. Keeny, of the Atlanta area, will preside at the men's council of the Atlanta conference of Methodist Episcopal churches which opens at 10 o'clock Monday morning at the Central Methodist church.

Lee-Roosevelt Camp No. 6, U. S. W. V., will hold a meeting at the Redman's Wigwam on Central avenue at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon to which the public is invited, it was announced Friday.

"Time of the End" is the title of a religious work just issued by J. M. Pirkle, Atlanta author. The work, in pamphlet form, purports to be an "explanation of Revelations and some of the most hidden prophesies of the Old Testament."

Fred Holbrook will deliver a religious address at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at Taft hall, municipal auditorium, he announced Friday. He is a Baptist, but is not an ordained minister.

Chairman Walter C. Hendrix, of the Fulton county commission, said Friday the county board intended "to take some action to relieve congested conditions" at the Fulton Tower. He called upon Jailer Bob Holland to furnish the commission with a list of all untried prisoners and also a list of state convicts being held at the jail. He said he would discuss some action with the remainder of the commission at its next meeting.

Judge Annabel Matthews, of the federal court of claims, Friday heard evidence to support a claim of the Canton Cotton Mills, Canton, against its income tax assessment from 1917 to 1919, the company asserting that because no allowance was made for post-war deflation the assessment should be reduced approximately $170,000.

Harry G. Millican, a naturalized citizen, Friday filed suit in Fulton superior court asking a divorce from his wife, Florence, whom he alleges deserted him in 1928 and took their two children to Southampton, England. A copy of the complaint is to be sent to Southampton to be served on Mrs. Millican, J. W. Simmons, clerk of the court, said.

Dr. John Cross, director of the summer school of Columbia University, Friday was honor guest at a luncheon given by principals of Atlanta public schools.

Dr. John G. Wilkins, former borough physician, Friday had another quarrel with the borough government and indications were that it may wind up in the courts. He was granted a pension, effective December 15, and he contends that it should have been effective last July, the time when he applied for it following his indictment. He subsequently was freed by a jury.

W. R. Echols, newly appointed inspector of weights and measures of the borough government, Friday warned independent ice peddlers that under the borough laws they are required to carry scales on their trucks and give full weight. Many of them, he said, have not obtained scales in conformity with the ordinance.

Rural mail carriers of Georgia will hold a conference at the Ansley hotel Sunday and Monday to consider matters of vital importance to the carriers, F. R. Lee, president of the carriers' association, announced Friday. The association has a 100 per cent plus membership among the rural carriers of the state, the list including substitutes and retired men.

Miss Mary Fisher Floyd, of LaGrange; Miss Susie Mayes, of Camak, and Miss Julia Thompson, of Marietta, will be consecrated for missionary service at home and abroad at the meeting of the Women's Missionary Council of the Methodist church at Memphis March 11-17. Miss Mayes will go to China, Miss Thompson to Mexico, and Miss Floyd will work in the United States.

The Center Hill District Safety and Civic League will meet at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Center Hill Masonic Temple.

Dr. Luther R. Hogan, of Oglethorpe University, will lecture before the adult Bible class of the Ponce de Leon Baptist church Sunday morning, according to an announcement by W. Grady Miller, president of the class.

Dr. William M. Sentell Sunday will begin a series of morning sermons based on the life of Christ, at the College Park Baptist church. His first subject Sunday morning will be "The Miraculous Birth." The series will continue each Sunday morning through Ajril 5.

The Atlanta Baptist Sunday School Association will meet Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Western Heights Baptist church, corner of Chestnut and Kennedy streets. Dr. W. H. Faust, pastor of Gordon Street Baptist church, will preside and all Sunday school workers are invited to attend.

Dr. Sam Cartledge, of Columbia Seminary, will supply the pulpit of the Woodlawn Presbyterian church until a permanent pastor may be called, it was announced Friday. He will preach at both the morning and night services Sunday.

Mrs. S. P. Powell, known to radio audiences as "Aunt Sally," will feature the Sponsor's Day program of the Men's Bible Class at Druid Hills Methodist church at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning, according to an announcement by J. C. Aycock, president of the class. Mrs. Eugenia C. Fambrough and her orchestra will furnish special music.

Dr. W. G. Cram, general secretary of the board of missions of the Methodist church, south, of Nashville, Tenn., will speak at the St. Mark's Methodist church Sunday morning and night.

J. O. McLaughlin, 23-year-old soldier of Fort McPherson, was injured in an automobile wreck near Smyrna early Friday afternoon while on the way to a funeral. He was taken to Grady hospital and later transferred to the post hospital at Fort McPherson. His injuries were not thought to be serious.

Heflin Gains Point In Ballot Box Fight

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(UP)—Senator J. Thomas Heflin, independent democrat, Alabama, today apparently advanced a step in his efforts to have a senate committee impound ballot boxes of the Alabama fall election in which he lost his seat to John H. Bankhead. Heflin has served notice of a contest.

After considerable debate, Heflin apparently succeeded in framing a compromise resolution satisfactory to democratic and republican leaders, but it was referred under the rules to the senate audit and control committee for consideration.

The resolution would authorize the senate privileges and elections committee to impound the Alabama boxes and, upon the formal filing of a contest, to examine them.

LEASE ANSWERS REFUSED BY NEW

Former Postmaster-General Defies Senator Blaine in Quizzing.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—The senate committee investigating postoffice leases today dropped its inquiry temporarily after former Postmaster-General New had flatly refused to discuss what took place at a cabinet meeting during the Coolidge administration.

The session was marked by savage exchanges between New and Chairman Blaine with two other committee members supporting the former postal official. Blaine was assailed for his method of questioning New.

Several times New showed feeling at Blaine's method of examination and once accused him of asking "insulting questions."

The cross-examination of New centered almost entirely around a letter from former Budget Director Lord to New recommending purchase of the St. Paul commercial station postoffice and a memorandum written by New telling of discussion of the station lease at a cabinet meeting.

When Blaine began to question New about the memorandum the witness refused to discuss what had taken place in the cabinet meeting.

The memorandum said during the cabinet session the then Secretary of State Kellogg "vehemently" remarked that the lease was "very much to the disadvantage of the government."

Later in the day the senate refused a demand by Blaine that the treasury-postoffice appropriation bill be sent back to conference for restoration of his amendment to require cancellation clauses in all postal garage leases.

The conference report was adopted by 52 to 18 despite Blaine's plea the amendment was for the protection of the government.

Lord, in his letter written in October, 1926, said the government was obligated under the lease to pay $2,415,000 in rentals over a 20-year period for a building estimated to have cost $450,000. He recommended in view of this "excessive" cost that the building be purchased.

Messenger Held Up.

Willie Alexander, negro messenger boy for Taylor's Pharmacy, at 810 Highland avenue, reported to police Friday night that three young white men, riding in a large sedan, held him up and robbed him of $5. The robbery occurred in front of 1027 St. Charles avenue, he said.

How To Relieve Sick Headaches In 3 Minutes

When one of those sick, raging headaches come and you want three-minute relief, go to any drug store or soda fount and ask for a package or dose of "B-C" (10c and 25c packages) the wonderful new preparation of a North Carolina druggist that is guaranteed safe and speedy, without depression or bad after effects.

"B-C" relieves any kind of a headache, sciatic, neuralgic or female pain, because it contains several ingredients that function together for the relief of pain, regardless of its origin. The "B-C" formula is one of the most important medical discoveries of recent years, accomplishing in a few minutes what no one drug formula can do under 1 to 3 hours.—(adv.)

The Hank Simmons "Show Boat" group will present its version of Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" tonight from 9 to 10 o'clock over WGST and Columbia Broadcasting System. Harry C. Brown and Phil Maher have adapted the George L. Aiken dramatic version of this immortal piece for radio production.

When Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote the story she did not see the possibilities of a dramatic play, nor did she imagine that it would aid in freeing a race of people from slavery. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has been played by more theatrical companies than any other play ever written.

Guy Lombardo and His Royal Canadians will top the program over WGST tonight for dance music. Guy and his orchestra will go on the air at 10:30, broadcasting for 30 minutes. This program will be followed by an hour's dance from the Shrine mosque, from 11 to 12 o'clock.

KING WILL KNIGHT CAMPBELL TODAY

LONDON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—At a public reception in Westminster hall this afternoon Captain Malcolm Campbell, holder of the world's automobile speed record, heard Herbert Morrison, minister of transport, describe his feat of traveling 245 miles an hour as "enchancing British prestige and the efficiency of British engineers."

The captain, who is to be knighted tomorrow by King George, replied briefly, "I have been a small link in the great chain of British enterprise. If I have helped to cement friendship between ourselves and America I feel proud."

Ambassador Charles G. Dawes will speak tonight at a dinner in Captain Campbell's honor given by the British Racing Drivers Club.

GOVERNOR CARLTON'S MOTHER GIVEN PARTY

WAUCHULA, Fla., Feb. 20.—(AP)—Mrs. Martha Carlton, 80-year-old mother of Governor Doyle E. Carlton and seven other children, was given a belated birthday party yesterday by her sons and daughter, 33 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren. Only the governor was absent. He was detained in Jacksonville but sent his greetings and regrets. Pressure of business caused him to ask for a postponement last February 10, the date of Mrs. Carlton's anniversary.

SCHOOL LIQUOR RAID CLOSED AFFAIR TO LAW

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 20.—(AP)—So far as the law is concerned, the recent raiding of five University of Michigan fraternity houses is a "closed incident."

Seventy-nine students who were aroused from their beds and sent to police headquarters when Ann Arbor police seized liquor in the houses were so informed today by County Prosecutor Albert Rapp. The students were met by the prosecutor as they appeared before Justice of the Peace Bert E. Fry for an adjourned hearing.

The university already has closed the five fraternity houses and imposed other punishment of a social nature on the organizations.

HOUSE GROUP APPROVES DEPORTATION MEASURE

Laws Would Rid United States of All Undesirable Aliens.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Legislation to accelerate deportation of undesirable aliens and to exclude alien communists from the United States was reported favorably today by the house immigration committee.

The measures are in line with the administration's plans for a nationwide campaign to rid the country of undesirables.

The communist exclusion measure was by Representative Bachmann, republican, West Virginia, while Chairman Johnson, of the committee, sponsored the other bill.

The Bachmann measure would exclude alien communists by placing them under the same deportation law as anarchists. It was one of several bills recommended by the Fish communist investigating committee.

Under the Johnson proposal the method of handling deportation cases would be simplified by permitting prosecution of an illegal entrant in the federal district court where he was apprehended.

Under existing law, he has to be prosecuted at the place where he entered.

Persons convicted of crimes not involving moral turpitude also would be deportable under the Johnson bill. At present deportations largely are based on charges involving moral turpitude.

Another provision would permit the secretary of labor to authorize certain high ranking subordinates to issue deportation warrants. Only the labor department head can issue warrants under existing law. Advocates of the measure contended this resulted in delay and useless expense.

The Bachmann bill would not apply to American born or naturalized communists, but would put the aliens in the same category as anarchists. The committee approved it unanimously.

Bachmann explained there were several hundred alien communists in this country "who are here for the purpose of destroying our government."

'Ambulance Baby' Greets World

This little miss greeted a topsy-turvy world Friday. As a Grady ambulance, lurching and swinging at a rapid pace through thick traffic, rushed Mrs. Hazel Newsome, 18, of 607 West Washington street, East Point, to the hospital, Joe Stork won a race with the machine and the six-pound girl raised a lusty yell to tell the world she was alive and kicking. Mother and child are doing fine. Photo by Bill Mason, staff photographer.

NEW ORLEANS BLAZE DOES $50,000 DAMAGE

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Fire originating at a gasoline tank wagon hose today destroyed the Checker Cab Garage at 1112-14 Poydras street, endangering the lives of a dozen persons in an adjoining rooming house and damaged nearly a half dozen nearby stores of the crowded business section. Total damage was estimated at above $50,000.

15 GROUPS NOW HOLD 85 PER CENT OF RAILS

'Rain of Geme' Follows Abortive Jewel Theft

Poking a crowbar through a jewelry store window filled with $30,000 in gems, three holdup men seized a tray holding $5,000 worth and made a break for their car. The manager, Charles Kramer, came out shooting, winged one of them and put their car out of commission.

As they took to their heels, they returned his fire, shooting him in the leg, and scattered the gems all over the corner of Grand and Forsyth streets. Guarded by a heavy police detail, Kramer and his employes crawled on their hands and knees until they found most of the loot. Many an urchin stood by in unbelief.

Salonia Chapter Honors Electas With Program

Honoring Mrs. R. E. Breedlove, Electa for 1931 of the Salona chapter, No. 227, O. E. S., the chapter presented an impressive program last Monday evening. Others honored upon this occasion were others who had served as Electa since the reorganization of the chapter, including: Mrs. J. E. Wood, Electa for 1926, 1927, 1928 and 1929; Miss Harriet Mayne, Electa for 1925; Miss Alma Hughes, Electa for 1923. As the four Electas were introduced and escorted by Miss Ethel Jackson, grand conductress of Georgia, O. E. S., to their reserved seats, Salonia's choir sang "Tell Them of Electa." Mrs. Marie Florence, past matron, paid tribute to the late Mrs. Annie Mae Bryant, the first Electa. Mrs. George Storey, worthy matron, told of the worthy deeds of Mrs. D. W. Jackson for the Salonia chapter, she being the mother of the present Electa of the grand conductress, past organist; Mrs. C. S. Mangleburg, and also the mother of T. H. Jackson, chairman of the finance committee. Mrs. Jackson was conducted to a seat of honor.

Mrs. Johnnie Power, past grand Electa of the state of Louisiana, told the traditional history of Electas, and paused in the midst of her talk while a human cross was formed by 10 young girls, dressed in white, with long red ribbons suspended from their shoulders and bearing lighted tapers.

Mrs. J. K. Patrick, past matron, placed a large basket overflowing with gifts from the pantry shower by the officers, at the foot of the cross, while Mrs. John Taylor and Mrs. C. S. Mangleburg sang "Give of Your Best to the Master." These gifts were presented to Mrs. Rosa Walker Mayne, chairman of the relief committee, to assist in filling appeals made for the needy.

Mrs. Carlton Beusse, past matron, in behalf of the chapter presented each of the four Electas with small engraved silver loving cups, mounted on black bases, Mrs. D. W. Jackson, a small white morocco Bible with emblem and letters of gold, and Mrs. Power, past grand Electa of Louisiana, a lovely gift.

Agnes Scott Founders' Day Dinner Planned For This Evening

The Agnes Scott Founders' Day dinner will be held in the Pompeian room of the Biltmore hotel this evening at 6:45 o'clock, following the annual radio program of the Agnes Scott Alumnae Association. Mrs. John Scott, president of the Decatur club of the association, will preside, with Miss Florence Perkins, the Atlanta club president.

The program centers around the idea of the earlier days, with a delightful skit written by Mrs. George Erwin and with Miss Emma Wesley and Mrs. Robert MacDougall assisting, with Mrs. Erwin and Miss Wesley in costume of their college days, representing the earlier and later days at Agnes Scott. The minuet will be danced by several couples from the college, who will be in costume appropriate to the dance.

An unusual feature will be the presence of two great-grandchildren of Colonel George Washington Scott, the founder of Agnes Scott, Miss Betty Sams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hansford Sams, of Decatur, and Master Milton Earthman, son of Mrs. Henry Earthman, also of Decatur, whose birthdays both occur on the same day as their illustrious grandfather, Colonel Scott, which the alumnae are celebrating.

Mrs. Harris Hostess.

One of the loveliest social events of the week was given yesterday when Mrs. Evelyn Harris entertained at a tea at her home on Peachtree circle, honoring a trio of the season's debutantes, Misses Frances Barnwell, Mary Goddard and Carolyn Paullin. The tea table was covered with a Venetian lace cloth and centered with a bowl of calla lilies in tones of yellow. The guests included a group of the debutante contingent of society.

Miss Miller Feted.

Miss Peggy Poindexter was hostess yesterday at a luncheon at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue, complimenting Miss Ruth Miller, popular bride-elect, whose marriage to Eben Hardie, Jr., of New Orleans, will be an event of February 24.

Miss Clare Jones entertained at tea yesterday in honor of this bride-elect. Those invited included Misses Myra Boynton, Harriett Wynne, Jaqulin Moore, Anne Ridley, Elizabeth Thompson, Flora Hardie and Adele Jahncke, of New Orleans, and Mrs. Cody Laird.

Junior Hadassah To Celebrate Purim Sunday, Feb. 22

Atlanta unit, Junior Hadassah, meets Sunday afternoon at 3 'oclock at the Henry Grady hotel. Plans for raising further funds with which to meet the Palestinian quota allotted the unit will be discussed. Mrs. Sara Gordon Hirsch announces that an attractive program has been arranged, celebrating the approaching Jewish holiday, Purim, or the Feast of Esther as it is frequently called. Hadassah being the Hebrew name for Esther, the holiday is of particular significance to this organization.

Miss Alisa Aboulafia, who is visiting her brother and sister, Dr. and Mrr. David Beth-Lahmy, will be the principal speaker Sunday afternoon. Miss Aboulafia has just come to this country from Palestine, where she has spent her entire life. She is in a position to relate actual facts concerning Palestinian developments, culturally, politically and industrially. Her charm of manner and accent, both of which are particularly Palestinian, make certain that her talk will be informative and entertaining. Music for the program will be furnished by Professor Boris Dunev, a Russian pianist who is now making his home in Atlanta. Mr. Dunev received his musical education in Russia under great masters.

This meeting has also been set aside for the annual Purim shower. Each year Junior Hadassah has one meeting when small gifts such as tooth brushes, wash rags, soap, towels, etc., are brought by the members for the children of Meir Shfeir, a girls' home that is sponsored by the association. The presence of every Junior Hadassah member is urged and the request is made that each member not fail to bring a gift to some child in Meir Shfeir. Refreshments in the form of Haman cakes, the traditional Purim repast, will be served.

Roberts-Beadles Rites.

Of interest to a large circle of friends is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Sarah Louise Roberts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving H. Roberts, Sr., and Robert Theron Beadles, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nat R. Beadles. The marriage was solemnized Saturday at 3 o'clock at the Kirkwood Baptist church, Rev J. L. Jackson performing the ceremony. The vows were taken in the presence of the immediate families and an assembly of close friends.

Miss Regina Barfield, a former classmate and sorority sister of Mrs. Beadles acted as maid of honor. She entered alone. Miss Barfield was gowned in blue crepe fashioned along silhouette lines. Her hat and accessories were blue. A corsage of vari-colored sweet peas completed her costume.

The bride entered with her father, who gave her in marriage. They were met at the altar by the bridegroom and his brother, Wilber Hugh Beadles, who acted as best man.

The bride was beautifully gowned in a model of blue chiffon and ecru lace, made along flowing lines. Her hat was a spring model in blue. Her corsage was of pink rosebuds.

The musical program was in charge of Miss Zula Foster and Bervard P. Owen. Before the ceremony Miss Foster sang "O Promise Me."

The bride and bridegroom left immediately for New Orleans to attend Mardi Gras. After the wedding trip they will be at home at 186 Degress avenue, N. E., Inman Park.

Among the out-of-town guests for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Beadles and Miss Mary Lynn Beadles and Mrs. Munro Whitmore, of Meoqui, Chihuahua, Mexico.

PATRIOTIC NOTE FEATURES GAYETIES SET FOR TODAY

Tree Planting To Honor Memory of Washington

In anticipation of George Washington's birthday, which will be celebrated tomorrow throughout the entire United States, today's social gayeties will sound a patriotic note in decorations as well as the spirit which will prevail at each affair. Following an annual custom, members of the Atlanta Athletic Club will give a brilliant ball this evening at this popular club in observance of the birthday anniversary of the Father of Our Country. Patriotic societies and organizations will also pay tribute to the memory of the first great leader of this country at impressive exercises planned for today. Perhaps the most elaborate of these will be the memorial tree planting sponsored by the Atlanta Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, the memorable occasion to take place at 3:30 o'clock in Piedmont Park. In planting a sturdy chestnut oak in memory of George Washington the Atlanta Chapter, D. A. R., is carrying out a national movement fostered by this society which has received the support of every loyal American. The Honorable Richard B. Russell, chief justice of the supreme court of Georgia, will make the dedicatory address at the tree planting which will be attended by several hundred prominent Atlantans.

Home Demonstration Club.

The Mayson Home Demonstration Club met Tuesday at the schoolhouse with ten members present. A demonstration was given on how to prepare liver and salmon. The club discussed spring gardens and their importance. At the next meeting Miss Erna Proctor, from the state agricultural college, will lecture on "Why Take a Spring Tonic."

Studio Tea.

Mrs. Gertrude L. Johnson invites the public to a studio tea to be given at the White Barn, on Fourteenth street at Peachtree Sunday, February 22, from 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock. An informal program of songs will be presented by Misses Margaret Myer, Frances Teague, Eleanor Stanford, Juliana Cocking, Blanche Albert, Eliesa Leokoff, Tom Joiner and William Norman Pettys. Additional numbers will be presented by the White Barn male quartet.

Hapeville Club.

A large and representative group of Hapeville Woman's Club members was present Thursday afternoon at city auditorium to hear Mildred Seydell talk on "Celebrities I Have Interviewed." Mrs. Seydell's account of the manner in which she approached and was received by the people of importance furnished one of the most interesting programs held by the club during the fiscal year. Mrs. J. Raymond Cathy, president, opened the meeting by presenting the chairman of the junior department, Mrs. S. E. Treadwell, and her daughter, Elizabeth, in a piano duet. Mrs. Cathy presented Mrs. Fred Johnson, press representative and chairman of the program, who introduced Mrs. Seydell. Mrs. J. L. Fulghum and Mrs. D. W. Austin served tea.

Theta Kappa Epsilon.

The Delta chapter of the Theta Kappa Epsilon sorority was organized February 14, 1929, by Miss Mary Cribbin, of the Alpha chapter in Washington, D. C. The officers and members of the sorority are: Miss Ruth Aiken, president; Miss Edna Huchingson, vice president; Miss Roma Day, treasurer; Miss Ruth Lewis, secretary. Other members are Misses Lois Latty, Margaret Williamson, Lorraine Moon, Evelyn Garrett, Marjorie Andrews and Mrs. Frank Holland.

Iris Club Honored.

Morningside Iris Club was entertained by Mrs. John B. Courtenay at a luncheon Wednesday at her home, 633 Sherwood road. Covers were laid for Mrs. Laurie H. Turner, Mrs. Jack H. Lane, Mrs. L. Walton Adams, Mrs. J. Ryan Jackson, Mrs. Robert L. Powledge, Mrs. J. H. Kinard, Mrs. W. M. Pharr, Mrs. W. W. Jackson, Mrs. John B. Courtenay and Mrs. M. H. Hendee, of Augusta, Ga. A feature was the cutting of the truest heart in the shortest length of time, Mrs. Powledge being the winner. The business session was presided over by the president, Mrs. Robert L. Powledge. Annuals and perennials, the subject for study, was discussed by Mrs. J. H. Kinard, Mrs. J. Ryan Jackson and Mrs. John B. Courtenay. Mrs. Powledge read an interesting article about Iris, the flower for which the club it named.

Cascade O.E.S. Meets,

Cascade Chapter No. 274 O. E. S. met Tuesday evening in the Cascade Avenue Masonic hall. Mrs. Mary Thomas Bush, worthy grand matron of the grand chapter of Georgia O. E. S., was unanimously made an honorary member of the chapter. On Thursday the members of the chapter gave a benefit luncheon at the home of Mrs. H. Grady Andrews on Lucile avenue. Mrs. Mell Hood, Mrs. Jennie Vrono, Mrs. Maude Wilson, Mrs. Maud Burnett, Mrs. Mattie Kelly and Mrs. Carrie Roberts assisted Mrs. Andrews in entertaining. Work in the degrees was a feature. Following the business session a Valentine party was enjoyed. Mrs. Bertha Hood, chairman, assisted by her committee, had prepared several contests, from which much amusement was derived. Mrs. Mell Hood, chairman of the refreshment committee, served punch. Inspection of Cascade chapter by the worthy grand matron, Mrs. Bush, will take place Saturday evening.

SPRING SPORTS TYPES INTRODUCE NEW SCALLOPS

It simulates a bolero in fashionable scallops and belts its waist at normal. The rever neckline is generally becoming.

The skirt favors the modish plaits and tops them with scallops to carry out the same diagonal theme of the bodice that tends to detract from breadth.

Style No. 786 can be had in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust. Size 36 requires 3 3-4 yards of 39-inch material with 2 1-4 yards of binding.

Spring, the season of prettiest styles, will soon be here. Prepare now by ordering a copy of our new Fashion Magazine. Attractive styles for women, misses and children. And instructive lessons in sewing.

Eighth and Ninth District Clubwomen To Make Weekly Broadcasts Over WTFI

Club leaders of the eighth and ninth districts of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs will make weekly half-hour broadcasts of federation work and plans for community development, over radio broadcasting station WTFI, located at Toccoa. This announcement was made by Mrs. H. D. Ritchie, of Athens, and Mrs. A. J. McCurry, of Winder, presidents of eighth and ninth districts, respectively, at the semi-annual executive board meeting, held yesterday at the Atlanta Woman's Club, and presided over by Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, president of the state organization. A series of practical discussions, coupled with workable suggestions along every line of club activity, will be worked out, looking toward genuine service for clubwomen and their communities as a result of this broadcasting which goes on the air at an early date.

To Meet at Henry Grady.

The board voted upon recommendation of Mrs. John Monaghan, of Pelham, second district president, to convene hereafter at the Henry Grady hotel, where headquarters have been established through the gift of the management, ever since last November. The movement was indorsed, and co-operation pledged with the Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind in securing the proposed legislation to further the need for home teachers in the state, to help those becoming blind after maturity to adjust themselves to their changed condition, as well as to give whatever intellectual or manual training is possible for those who for any reason have missed the educational advantages offered by the state to blind children. Another clause in this resolution cited the establishment of a plant devoted to the training and employment of the blind.

Raise $10,000 Maintenance.

Board members voiced the assurance of the $10,000 maintenance fund for Tallulah Falls school, a pledge made three years ago, that Georgia clubwomen would contribute one-third annually to the support of the federation's school, wherein mountain boys and girls are being educated. Mrs. John K. Ottley, president of the board of trustees of Tallulah school, made a report, and placed before the board the importance of raising this $10,000 goal. Mrs. A. H. Brenner, of Augusta, past president of Georgia Federation, made a forceful talk upon the subject, and stressed that clubwomen work toward completing this maintenance fund.

Mrs. Sanford's Report.

Mrs. S. V. Sanford's report called attention to the school and the splendid leadership of Mrs. John K. Ottley, president of the board of trustees. She said:

"Whenever your president goes and tells the story of the federation's great work in supporting and maintaining a federation school, she is struck with the remarks made by other state presidents. They are astounded that so much has been done for the children of the mountains and that the federation has such a project. Some day we must raise sufficient funds so that the 'Light of the Mountains' will be able to function upon the revenues of a well-invested endowment—so that it will be what we term on easy street. When one visits that school, one will wonder how so much has been accomplished with apparently so little effort on the part of the clubwomen. It has not been accomplished without trials and tribulations. To Mrs. Ottley and her associates go the credit of the federation's greatest asset—'The Light of the Mountains.'"

Mrs. Gholston's Appointment.

The appointment of Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, state chairman of library extension, as a member of the Georgia library commission by Governor Hardman, was announced by Mrs. Sanford. Mrs. Gholston merits the tribute as she has used every effort to promote library extension. Mrs. Sanford's report will be published at a later date upon the official club page in The Constitution. Mrs. J. A. Rollison, president of Waycross Woman's Club, and official hostess to the biennial council of Georgia Federation, convening in Waycross May 12-15, inclusive, extended greetings, and stated that her three-year-old club is invested with youthful ambition, and awaits with pleasure the forthcoming council members.

Those Attending.

Among those attending the meeting were Mrs. S. V. Sanford, Athens; Mrs. R. K. Rambo, Atlanta; Mrs. G. V. Cate, Brunswick; Mrs. A. O. Granger, Atlanta; Mrs. James E. Hays, Montezuma; Mrs. E. L. Brenner, Augusta; Mrs. Lamar Rucker, Athens; Mrs. E. L. Coleman, Barnesville; Miss Rosa Woodberry, Atlanta; Mrs. John K. Ottley, Atlanta; Mrs. Charles Haden, Atlanta; Mrs. M. E. BURGESS CHILDREN'S STORIES

RUN, PETER, RUN.

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

The wings of fear in times of need
—Jumper the Hare.

The truth of this saying was proven to Jumper right before his eyes. It was Peter Rabbit who did it. You see, as Jumper and Peter was passing a certain dark green tree, a cedar tree with thick low-growing branches, they had been given a most startling surprise. Jumper had become suspicious that all was not well, and with a call to Peter to run for a big brush pile some distance away, had taken to his long heels. Peter had heeded the warning instantly, not waiting to find out what the danger might be, and had started off, lipperty-lipperty-lip, heading straight for the big brush pile.

Now, the instant Peter started, out from under that cedar tree leaped Yowler the Bobcat. Jumper was scared. Oh, yes, Jumper was scared. He always is scared when he knows that Yowler is about. But Jumper wasn't as badly scared as was Peter Rabbit. In truth, Jumper's real fear was more for his small cousin than for himself. He knew that those long hindlegs of his could keep him out of reach of Yowler's claws even though Yowler is himself some jumper for a short distance. But Peter cannot cover half the distance in a single jump that Jumper can, and Jumper knew this.

So did Yowler. He would much rather have Jumper, for the latter was so much bigger that he would make a far better meal, but Peter would do very well and would be, or should be, much easier to catch. So Yowler didn't so much as look in the direction of Jumper. He fixed his eyes on that little bobbing gray-brown form which was Peter Rabbit and bounded after him.

"Run, Peter, run!" Jumper kept repeating over and over to himself, for you know he hasn't much of a voice.

"Run, Peter, run!" screamed Blacky the Crow, who happened along just in time to see Yowler leap out from under that tree.

"Run, Peter, run!" screamed Mrs. Blacky, hurrying up to see what was going on.

Peter didn't need to be told to run. No, indeed! Never had he run faster and never had he had greater need of running his fastest. Had Peter been only a very little nearer that cedar tree when Yowler leaped out, he would have had no chance at all. Yowler's first leap was a mighty bound that carried him a long way, and his second bound was almost equal to it. If he could have kept up those long leaps Peter wouldn't have had a chance, but he couldn't.

As it was he was near enough to Peter to fill the latter with such fear as he had known but once or twice before in his life. And that fear was lending wings to Peter's feet, which made it seem as if he fairly flew over the snow. What that really means is that Peter was so frightened that he was running faster than he had supposed he could.

There was no place of safety short of the big brush pile toward which he was running. He must reach that brush pile first or furnish a dinner for Yowler the Bobcat. That great pile of brush was his only possible hope for life, and it didn't look like very much of a hope.

"Run, Peter, run!" shrieked Blacky.

"Run, Peter, run!" screamed Mrs. Blacky.

Peter didn't hear either of them. He heard nothing. His whole attention was centered on reaching that brush pile before Yowler reached him, and he was beginning to doubt if he could do it. It seemed as if that brush didn't get one bit nearer. It seemed as if it were going away from him faster than he went toward it. Of course, this wasn't so at all. Every jump was taking Peter nearer to that big pile of brush. It didn't seem so, simply because he was so terribly frightened and so very, very anxious to get there.

"Go it, Peter! Go it! Run, Peter, run!"

O.E.S. Sponsors Party

Clara Hendrich Memorial Chapter, O. E. S., sponsors "Aunt Jurusha's Quilting Party" Saturday, February 28, at 8 o'clock in Greenfield lodge, Moreland and McLendon avenues. An admission fee of 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children will be charged.

Birthday Party.

Mrs. W. P. Lockhart was hostess at a birthday party Tuesday afternoon at her home on Ferguson street in honor of her little daughter, Betty, who celebrated her sixth birthday. George Washington colors and souvenirs were used, each child being given an appropriate souvenir. Prizes were won by Ellen Guest, Hubert Kitchens, Lois Simmons, Marguerite Davis and Frances Adams. Those present were Rose Ellen Armstrong, Jimmie Cobb, Lavice Hightower, Anne Simmons, David Walters, Kathryn Queen, Edwin Breedlove, Frances Davis, Jack Berry, Marguerite Davis, Robert Owens, Betty Anne Pope, Hubert Kitchens, Jean Sewell, Ellen Guest, Lois Simmons and Frances Adams.

Benefit Bridge.

Atlanta Unit, Women's Overseas Service League, will sponsor a benefit bridge party this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at Washington Seminary. Reservations for this affair can be made by telephoning the president of the organization, Mrs. John H. Harland, Dearborn 2749-J, or any other member of the overseas unit.

A prize for each table will be given as well as a number of additional prizes. Proceeds from the party will be used toward the service work in which this group of women are interested.

Collegiate Interests Feature Oglethorpe Board Meeting

The midwinter meeting of the Oglethorpe woman's board, which was held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles A. Conklin, was entirely devoted to collegiate interests, that the members might better familiarize themselves with the various activities at this growing young institution. The guests arrived to the music of the Oglethorpe orchestra under the able leadership of Jeff McMillan, and the speakers of the afternoon confined their remarks to the development of Oglethorpe along literary, artistic and athletic lines.

Mrs. Haynes McFadden, president, was in the chair, and after routine business was transacted, called on the membership chairman, Mrs. Charles F. Rice, to introduce several new members who were present in the persons of Mrs. Foster Hume, Miss Olymphe Trabue, Mrs. Russell Whitman, Mrs. W. P. Dunn, Mrs. James Stanley Moore and Mrs. C. D. Stevens. Mrs. McFadden regretfully announced that Mrs. Rogers Winter, who has been the efficient publicity chairman of the board for many years, had resigned on account of removal from Atlanta, and she introduced the newly appointed successor to Mrs. Winter, Mrs. Forrest Barfield, of 3106 Andrews drive.

Dr. James Routh, dean of the school of literature and journalism, spoke of the work done by the students of the Players Club and mentioned the young men who have gained recognition in New York and elsewhere since their graduation from Oglethorpe. Earl S. Blackburn, president of the Players Club, supplemented Dr. Routh's remarks by outlining the club's plans for their spring entertainment which will be the Petrel Follies. He bespoke the co-operation of the woman's board in putting on this extravaganza which has come to be a recognized institution among the playgoers of Atlanta.

New Developments.

Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe, spoke on some new developments at the university and said that the scholastic year of 1930-1931 had witnessed a number of important new developments. The art department under the capable direction of Fritz Paul Zimmer, a German artist trained in the best schools of Europe, is divided into commercial and fine art classes, both of which are doing notable work. Mr. Zimmer is also conducting extension classes for adult students, who are availing themselves of the opportunity to receive expert training either in the direction of practical designing for commercial purposes, or advanced work in portrait painting or modeling.

Among Mr. Zimmer's personal achievements of the year have been superb busts of Dr. J. T. Lupton, of Chattanooga, one of the staunchest friends and supporters of the university and of the late Ernest Hartsock, who was professor of poetics at Oglethorpe and founder and editor of Bozart and the Bozart Press.

The literary developments of the present year have been especially notable. From the University Press has come the Oglethorpe Book of Georgia Verse, edited by Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, assisted by Dr. Mary Brent Whiteside and Dr. James E. Routh. This collection covers 200 years of poetic activity in the state and contains 500 pages, in which 104 poets identified with Georgia are represented. The list of authors includes a number of international figures who have been accorded many honors.

Several other interesting volumes are now in press and will be issued shortly. Westminster Magazine, published quarterly at Oglethorpe, has been enlarged and several new departments added. The list of contributors to this periodical now includes a score of names of national and international distinction.

Bozart Press.

In January Oglethorpe University took over the Bozart Press, founded by the late Ernest Hartsock, and the poetry magazine, Bozart and Contemporary Verse, with which Japan and the Oracle had also been combined. This work will be carried on largely as it was begun by its late founder and editor and the staff at Oglethorpe have received scores of letters from subscribers and contributors the country over, pledging their loyal support in the new venture. The next issue of Bozart and Contemporary Verse, which will appear about March 1, will be in the nature of a memorial to Ernest Hartsock.

More than usual attention has been devoted this season to intra-mural athletics. Varsity and freshman squads alike have been practicing both baseball and football daily and the co-eds, many of whom are experts at basketball, have developed opposing teams that have been enthusiastically at work all winter. It has been proposed that season tickets should be available next fall at a reduced rate, for all games to be played at Hermance stadium, the season in question to include four games.

Following the business meeting of the board, Mrs. Conklin entertained the members at a reception. The home was beautifully decorated in spring flowers in the Oglethorpe colors, gold and black, and the lace-covered tea table had a central epergne filled with jonquils and narcissus. Mrs. E. Rivers, immediate past president, presided at the samovar and Mrs. Katherine Connerat, vice chairman of the executive committee, poured coffee. About 100 guests were present.

Mrs. Meaders Entertains.

Mrs. C. C. Meaders entertained at a bridge-tea at her home on Lakeview drive Friday afternoon. The decorations reflected the George Washington patriotic color motif. Mrs. Frank Clegg and Mrs. R. L. Suggs won prizes at bridge. Those invited were Mesdames Olin Wages, A. B. Beitman, J. H. Suggs, C. E. Entriken, A. G. Coffee, J. E. Cofer, John Ponders, C. M. Barclay, T. E. Wooten, W. McKinley and Frank Clegg.

Mr., Mrs. Ponder Hosts

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Ponder entertained at a bridge party last evening at their home on Cascade road. The George Washington birthday idea was carried out in all details of the decorations. Mrs. LeRoy Hubbard and C. A. Perry won high score prizes and Mrs. Cecil Hearn won low. Consolation was drawn by Mrs. B. C. Littlejohn. The invited guests included Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Littlejohn, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Perry, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Hubbard and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hearn.

INSTALLMENT XV.

More and more often, now, she was indefinite and vague in her reply.

"I don't know," she'd say. "I can't tell, yet. Call me up later."

Then, as often as not, when, obediently, he telephoned again, she'd have gone out, leaving no word as to where, or of when she'd be home again. He became pretty difficult himself, socially; he wouldn't make dates ahead, lest they deprive him of a chance to see her. And insensibly, at first, but later with his full knowledge, that sort of thing preyed upon his nerves, stretched his patience with her toward the breaking point.

He tried hard to be fair and reasonable about it, but it wasn't easy. He was able, in his saner moments, to understand exactly what had happened; to analyze his subconscious mental processes. And he knew, when he did that, that he had, really, no just grounds for complaint against her. She'd been perfectly frank with him; she'd told him that, for her, Ross came first. She was doing, after all, with him, exactly what he did with other people. She wouldn't commit herself to seeing him if there was a chance that she might see Ross instead.

Yet it was one thing to work all this out, logically, in his mind, and it was quite another to control his emotional reactions. He had perfectly human and normal fits of jealousy; he lost his temper; he decided, again and again, that the game wasn't worth the candle. Only—he never quite dared to tell her so. That was because he knew he was in the position of a man who brandishes an unloaded pistol. He loved her so much, seeing her even for five minutes, dancing with her once or twice around the crowded floor of a night club, meant so much to him, that he simply didn't have the courage to risk the loss of those moments by anything in the nature of an ultimatum.

And besides, there were tremendous compensations. There were times when she turned to him; days when he had utterly delightful hours with her, over which the shadow of Ross didn't lie at all. Those were the times when it seemed to him that she was escaping from the queer, unhealthy hold that Ross had on her imagination and her heart—for, more and more, he was coming to feel, and to be encouraged by the feeling, that Ross appealed only to one side of her, and that the side that was least definitely a permanent part of her.

It was a phase of her that was just now, to be sure, in the ascendant, but it seemed to him that her background, her essential character, her deepest mental and emotional traits, were all in conflict with it. He had sense enough to know that, on that score, his judgment wasn't trustworthy; that it was fatally easy in such matters for the wish to be the father of the thought. Yet it was, after all, the whole foundation of a structure of hope that, being human, he had to build up to sustain him in his struggle.

She did, gradually, begin to talk to him about Ross; that was one fortunate outcome, it seemed to him, of the showdown they'd had.

"If I had any pride—!" she said, stormily. "Why haven't I, Peter? Twice, now, I've fallen in love with men who don't really care about me! First Tack—now Evan! Oh, I can make them care, in a way—for a while. But—"

"I know," he said. "Pride—well, it just doesn't matter, I guess, when you're in love with someone. It gets hold of you, when you're alone, and you rave a bit, and then—well, you forget all about it the first time you're sent for."

"I am beastly to you, Peter," she said, remorsefully. "Heavens—I needn't make you listen while I kick and scream!"

"Oh, go ahead!" he said. "Don't you worry about me. I can stand it."

"You oughtn't to have to," she said. "Only—I wish I could understand! I hate the feeling that I'm up against a blank wall! I'm not! I won't be. I've never really been beaten yet, and I won't be."

"That's a good way to feel," said Peter.

"I've always got everything I wanted—"

"In a way—I suppose you have," he said. "The trouble is—it doesn't always keep on being what you thought it was. He hesitated; then went on. "You got Tack, but—"

"I know," she said. "That frightens me, too, sometimes, Peter. Don't make me think of that. I don't like to remember the trouble I've made."

So things went on, not changing much from day to day, superficially, at least, yet with, Peter had to suppose, a certain continuous progress and movement toward—well, what? He didn't know. That was, principally, his trouble. His training, all the work he'd done, so far, in his maturity, had made him one to want always to be working toward a definite, clearly seen goal. You were always doing that in a research.

You knew what you were after; you knew, quite explicitly, the object of all you did. You strayed often enough, even in quiet hours in a deserted laboratory, down by-paths, but pretty soon you came to something that showed you you were on the wrong road, and you could retrace your steps, and get started in the right direction again.

This business wasn't at all like that. There was no way of checking up results, measuring progress or lack of progress. A woman wasn't at all like scientific truth, that fixed and immutable star on one's horizon, be that horizon near or remote. No sooner did he think that he was fathoming the depths of Martha's elusive and mysterious being than she shifted her whole ground, capriciously, and he had it all to do again.

He was constantly having to revise his whole estimate and judgment of her. She was always doing things wholly out of key with what he had made up his mind that her character, essentially, was. That wasn't true only of his own relation with her; it was constantly coming out in the way she got along, or didn't get along, with Tack.

She'd told him she was fond of Tack, although, obviously, she wasn't at all in love with him any more. Part of the time her fondness for him was evident. But very often her treatment of him backed up what he'd heard Tack say, once: "Martha's got it in for me." It was understandable enough, Peter supposed. Tack was drunk night after night. He alienated people, annoyed them, embarrassed Martha. And still, there was something on his side. One of the things that was wrong with Tack was his dislike of Ross, and his resentment of Martha's intimacy with the chap, and there, Peter felt, Tack was emphatically in the right, and had, moreover, as Martha's husband, no matter how matters between them might stand, the right to express himself.

Peter was more confused, more troubled, more unhappy, than he had ever been before in his life. The standards that had served him all his life no longer did him any good. Under the test of this business, they'd broken down; he could no longer measure his own behavior by them; he certainly wasn't able to apply them to Martha. According to those standards, he'd behaved pretty badly himself, and Martha was wholly beyond the pale, but he knew, in his heart, that that was silly; that it just wasn't so.

And that brings this chronicle of events up to the night Tack Thayer was killed, and the quarrel with Martha that had sent Peter home to lie, tossing, restless and wakeful, in the dark, until he was aroused by the sinister, terrifying ringing of the telephone bell beside his bed.

His quarrel with Martha was not, in its general outline, unlike a dozen others they'd had; it was neither more nor less significant than they had been. He'd had tea with her, about 5 o'clock, and had asked her, casually, what she and Tack were doing that night.

"Nothing in particular," she said. "Being domestic, I think. Why don't you dine with us?"

"No," said Peter. "You and Tack dine with me, instead, and I'll get seats for that musical show you want to see—the one Jim Hudson's in. They say it's pretty good."

"All right," said Martha. "Where shall we meet?"

"Let's make it Romi's—about 7:30," said Peter.

FOXES ELECTED TO SALLY LEAGUE BERTH

Wayward Boye
Boswelled by Ed Danforth

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 20.—Wayward Boye, Inoperative No. 7777777777 of The Atlanta Constitution Cornpone & Potlikker Company, spent an entire day canvassing the city of Miami, Miami Beach, Hollywood, Coral Gables and other deceased subdivisions on behalf of the great fight The Constitution is waging to make the world safe for crumblers.

And when the sudden tropical night blotted out the twilight, Wayward had to admit defeat. He has interviewed tourists, bpusinessmen, boxers, referees and other sports figures now passing in review along the beach and the causeway. And he was baffled, thwarted and nonplussed. Apparently Miami is too far south ever to have heard of potlikker and cornpone, let alone testify to the technique of consuming it.

It was a shame, too, for the rains had ceased and the blazing sun was burning down to make up for lost time and Miami was smiling again. It was a fine day to go fishing. Wayward dropped that day forever in his zeal to spread the gospel of crumbling.

IT'S AN INSULT, TOO.

The first three men Wayward approached rebuffed him coldly. They were seated in the lobby of the McAllister hotel looking over their home town papers. One was from Englewood, N. J. Another was from Scranton, Pa. The third was from Racine, Wis.

When Wayward asked them whether they dunked or crumbled cornpone into potlikker, they coughed, folded their papers and moved. One of them spoke to a man in rubbed-heeled shoes who was lounging near the desk. He was the house detective.

Wayward went outside. There is a prohibition drive on down here.

SHIFT GETS NOWHERE.

Wayward changed his tactics in the afternoon. He borrowed a car from the Striblings and sought out prominent men whose stock in trade is talking for publication.

To each of them in turn he propounded this question:

They answered as follows:

Mickey Walker, world's middleweight champion boxer: "Naw, I never touch the stuff when I'm training. And I never could drink that, anyhow. What do you birds make it out of, anyhow. Carbolic acid?"

Primo Carnera, the Italian heavyweight: "I like-a dees countree ver much-a and I theenk I ween the championship in September, no matter."

Salazar, No. 33, star singles jai-ali player: "Dios, I will be glad when I am arrive in Havana again. This prohibition is no fun, huh?"

Irvin Berlin, song writer, down for the day from Palm Beach: "Cornpone, all alone; potlikker, hearts beat quicker. Say, there's a great chance for a lyric in that. We could ring in something about mammy bending over the range and needing a piece of change. You could have the song built around San Antone to help out the cornpone idea and have all the children come around and drink a toast to mammy with potlikker. What could be slicker?"

In desperation Wayward asked Pa Stribling whether he dunked or crumbled. Pa grinned and said: "Of course you crumble it and eat it with a tablespoon and a napkin tucked into your collar. You don't dunk anything except toast in coffee."

Ah, my countrymen, there spoke a true Georgian.

THE CLASHING NOTE.

However, I found one southerner who was a strong dissenter. He was Ed Dickerson, the famous referee, who was born in the Bluegrass region of Kentucky. Ed said:

"Well, to tell you the truth, I never cared a whoop for potlikker. We always threw it out at home. Since I grew up I have learned that in the list of southern delicacies there are two items that are vastly overrated. In fact, these two items are not fit for folks to eat.

"One is 'possum and 'taters. Nobody but a field hand can eat 'possum and 'taters and really enjoy it. Take it back; an Eskimo might like it as a stronger substitute for polar bear meat stewed in whale oil.

"The other is potlikker and bread of any sort. How it crashed into the same menu with fried chicken, corn pudding, hot biscuits, sugar-cured ham, battercakes and fried apples is beyond me." (Author's note: Check and double check, Ed.)

Haas, Here, Plans Return for Work

Mule Haas, Philadelphia outfielder and former Cracker, spent Friday in the city en route to Birmingham, Ala., where the all-star basketball team will play tonight.

Haas will return to Atlanta Tuesday for a 10-day visit, during which he will work at Bill Daly's health club on Spring street before proceeding to the Athletic training camp in Florida early in March.

Haas Friday wired George Earnshaw, Athletic pitcher, who is in Hot Springs, Ark., to come to Atlanta next week to train here with a dozen other well-known baseball players.

Bell-Craige Match Tops 'Y' Mat Card

A grudge match between A. K. Bell, light heavyweight champion, and Whitey Craige, a Y. M. C. A. veteran, will feature a regular Saturday night wrestling program at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. Both are well-known to Atlanta wrestling fans and are rated at the top in their class.

In addition to the feature there will be seven other worthwhile matches. They include: Bill Matheson vs. L. O. Henry, Weldon Hamby vs. Atlee Perkins; Earl Miller vs. Bill Peacock, Bill Carson vs. Whitey Patterson, Charles Cranne vs. Jack Branch, John Stevens vs. Red Alcott, Leon Fuller vs. J. D. Morris. An opponent for George Tatum will be named today.

McDONOUGH WINS.

McDONOUGH, Ga., Feb. 20.—The McDonough boys' basketball team won over the Jackson five in a one-sided game here today with a score of 32 to 5. At the end of the third quarter a substitute team was sent in. This group scored 10 points against the Jackson players.

PURPLES RALLY TO WIN, 37 TO 28, IN FIRST GAME

Boys' High Takes First From Clarkesville Aggies.

MACON, Ga., Feb. 20.—(AP)—With the smooth play of Savannah High, the defending champion, drawing widespread attention, five basketball teams representing widely scattered sections of the state vanquished first round opponents here today in the annual Georgia Interscholastic Athletic Association.

The pairings pit the five triumphant teams and three quints which drew byes against each other in quarterfinal play tomorrow. The schedule:

4:30 p. m.—Norman Park vs. Boys High of Atlanta.

8:30 p. m.—Lanier High of Macon vs. Riverside Military Academy of Gainesville.

9:30 p. m.—Columbus High vs. Tech High of Atlanta.

The first round saw Boys' High defeat Clarkesville, 35 to 28, while Norman Park won from Gordon Institute, 36 to 25. Columbus beat Georgia Military College, 31 to 22, Lanier High of Macon trampled Madison A. & M., 39 to 26, and Savannah High turned back Monroe A. & M., 52 to 32.

MACON, Ga., Feb. 20.—(AP)—A last quarter spurt led by Ezell and Glenn gave Boys' High, Atlanta, a 37-to-28 victory over Clarkesville A. & M. in the opening game of the G. I. A. A. basketball tournament here this afternoon.

Clarkesville, led by Sullivan, forward, stayed in the lead most of the game and led at the half, 16 to 15.

Norman Park Wins Over Gordon, 36-25.

In the second game of the tournament, Norman Park Junior College took a dispirited affair from Gordon Junior College, Barnesville, 36 to 25, to establish itself as a "dark horse of the meeting." Tomorrow Norman Park will play Boys' High, Atlanta, in the second round.

The smooth work of Allen, center, and Bingham, guard, was the feature of Norman Park's play. Thompson and Cason were the best performers for Gordon.

JUNIOR TOURNEY REACHES FINALS

Advancing after furious battles, respectively, with the Little Jackets and the Cardinals, the Terrors and the Y. M. C. A. Juniors entered the final round of the city junior basketball tournament on the Y. M. C. A. court Friday afternoon. They will meet for the title on the same floor at 8 o'clock tonight.

The Terrors took their place in the lower bracket in an afternoon game, trimming the Jackets at 30-24. The Terrors had previously beaten the Peacock and Bluebird quintets to advance.

A consistent first half spurt which netted 20 points while the Jackets were being held to 11 points gave the Terrors a lead enough to coast through the second half, despite a rally on the part of the Jackets.

Hilley with 17 points was the outstanding star in the victory. He was ably assisted by Tierce and Marion, Welch and Payne played the best for the losers.

G. I. A. A. Adopts Rules Of State High Schools

MACON, Ga., Feb. 20.—(AP)—Officials of the Georgia Interscholastic Athletic Association at a meeting here tonight adopted the constitution of the Georgia High School Association, and three teams which had resigned from the G. I. A. A. because of its rules conflicting with the high school association voted to withdraw their resignation.

Representatives of each school attended the meeting. The schools withdrawing their resignation were Benedictine, Savannah; Georgia Military Academy, College Park, and Tech High, Atlanta. They previously had resigned because high school rules forbade their playing under the G. I. A. A. constitution.

The high school association constitution was adopted in full by the G. I. A. A.

Hounds Save Dobbs From 'Dead' Winter

By Ralph McGill.

COLONEL JOHN DOBBS came striding into the Dutch luncheon of the Southern Association baseball writers at Engel stadium Thursday noon, helped himself to some white meat of a turkey and a hunk or so of bread and sat him down.

"It's the dullest baseball winter I ever spent," said Colonel Dobbs. "I never spent a duller one. About all the fun I've had is listening to my hounds run foxes at night. These warm nights I can sit on my front porch and listen to the music they make.

"I AM rather set up about our outfield this year. If those fellows will report I don't see why we won't have a great outfield. The pitching looks good enough. I think it ought to come through all right.

"I'm not so sure about the infield," continued the Cracker skipper. "It isn't shaped up as well as the outfield, the pitching and the catching."

It was revealed that Johnny Ryan, the White Sox shortstopper, may have to go to the spring camp with the Sox. And he may look too good to turn loose at that time. That, and the first base position, are causing some brow-knitting at Ringgold.

Fanning Bee.

DOBBS, Bert Niehoff and Joe Engel had quite a fanning bee about the baseball situation. Cousin Joe Engel, the Chattanooga owner, is going ahead with some big plans. His city is hard hit with unemployment and the like, but Joe Engel has cut none of his salaries and is to report the largest number of men any Southern club has ever had. He plans 75 or more.

He is making a great play for young players this season. Signing of Jim Scott Pullen, Georgia Tech's star shortstop of 1930, was just one of the moves.

Zinn Beck, who was a great success in the Southeastern league, where he handled young players, has been signed as a scout, aid to Niehoff and a coach for the young players.

Riotous Letter.

ALL promising young players are being signed. Engel has one letter that is a riot. He signed a young infielder from a small league. In the contract sent out this spring the young fellow was given a boost of $100 per month over his old contract. He wrote back asking more. "I want to say that I think you will be getting your regular third baseman pretty cheap, too," he said, in concluding his letter.

Johnny Dobbs has some young talent in mind and quite a lot of it will be reported. Dobbs plans to come to Atlanta about March 1, a week ahead of the regular reporting date.

Dobbs is very hopeful that there will be no holdouts on the club and that the entire squad will be reported on time so that a good start may be had.

TRIANGLES BEAT LEGION QUINTET

Starting surely and never faltering, the Atlanta Y. M. C. A. basketball quintet shot its way to a 47-37 decision over the invading American Legion team from Norcross, Ohio, on the Y court last night in a rough game.

With the exception of the opening few moments, when the score was tied at 2-2 and 4-4, the issue sustained nary a moment of doubtfulness. Tasker opened the scoring with a neat over-hand shot, Popp tied it with a pair of cleanly-sunk fouls, Kunz sent the lead to the Buckeye country with a crip, and Tasker came back to knot the count again. Fincher and Tasker opened up with a barrage from short range which sent the score soaring until by half-time the Triangles owned a 26-17 advantage which was indicative of the respective strength of the two teams.

Second half play proceeded along almost the same lines, with the invaders showing a slightly improved brand of ball which was never, however, good enough to climb the ladder. The lead possessed by the Y varied between the limits of six and 12 points throughout the period, and a closing spurt brought it back to the 10-mark with ease.

Fincher and Brock shared honors for the Y, with Lohr and Valentine doing the same in the invading camp.

Skeet Shoot Planned For This Afternoon

It is hoped that several five-man teams can be made up from some of the large concerns in Atlanta, so that a skeet league may be formed and shoots enjoyed during the summer.

The Western Union boys have made a number of improvements on their club grounds and it is expected that as soon as spring opens their facilities will be taxed to the limit. They will continue to invite all shotgun shooters to come out and enjoy themselves every week. This invitation is especially extended to the ladies.

RUBE BENTON OUT.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Rube Benton, former major league pitcher, was unconditionally released today by the Minneapolis baseball club of the American association. Benton's pitching hand was crushed in an automobile accident last fall.

Shea Is Beaten Easily by Francis

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Eddie Shea, the mid-west's hope in the featherweight lists, came back to New York for the first time in six years tonight and took one of the most surprising whippings of his long career from the busy fists of the bustling little Italian, Kid Francis.

Shea ran into an aggressive, two-fisted youngster who buried him for ten rounds under a cloud of leather, chased him all over the ring and easily took the unanimous verdict of the referee and two judges.

BULLDOGS PREP FOR A. A. C. TILT

Georgia Five Ready for Only Non-Conference Clash.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 20.—Back from a trip to Tennessee the Georgia Bulldogs today rested on their oars while they awaited the invasion of the Atlanta Athletic Club here Saturday night for the last game of the Bulldog's season.

Their interest largely taken up with thoughts of the coming Southern conference tournament, the Bulldogs still have time to think plenty about Saturday's game with the Atlanta club, the only game the Bulldogs play with a non-conference opponent during their regular season. No workout was held today—the boys have held enough practices for awhile.

The Bulldogs will seek to wreak revenge tomorrow for defeats handed them by the club last season. The Atlanta boys won two games out of three last year, leaving the Bulldogs on the short end of the season's series.

Jacket Five Faces Gamecocks Tonight.

Georgia Tech's basketeers left Atlanta last night for Columbia, S. C., where they meet the South Carolina Gamecocks tonight in their next-to-closing game of the conference court season. The Jackets play Auburn here next Wednesday in the final game before the tournament, which gets under way on the auditorium court next Friday afternoon.

The Jackets, who have been hard hit by the faculty and flu of late, rallied from a bad slump Wednesday on their home court to trounce the championship Alabama five. Coach Mundorff had been forced to shake his squad drastically to plug holes left by the vacancies of Tate, Phillips, Perkins and others of the ailing crew. Tate is out of school and Phillips is still on the sick list, but otherwise the Jackets are in good shape.

Cornera Ordered To Fight Maloney

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 20.—(AP)—The Miami Boxing Commission tonight ordered Primo Carnera to fight Jimmy Maloney, of Boston, on the night of March 5, as scheduled after prolonged debate over an official medical report, with x-rays, showing the big Italian heavyweight to have a fractured rib. The decision was accepted under protest by Carnera's board of managers.

Commission reached its verdict and obtained the acceptance of all concerned after listening to conflicting testimony from four physicians and occupying the side lines while Bill Duffy, American manager of Carnera, and Dan Carroll, Maloney's manager, engaged in a wordy debate over terms and forfeits for another return match, "if the fight here is close."

Tilden Again Beats Kozeluh at Boston

BOSTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—William T. Tilden defeated Karel Kozeluh, of Czecho-Slovakia 6-4, 2-6, 6-2, 7-5 in an exhibition professional tennis match before 8,000 spectators at the Boston garden tonight.

PLACING SAVES COLUMBUS CLUB FOR GOOD YEAR

By Herb Clark.

Roses were in the air out Ponce de Leon way Friday afternoon.

The aura of spring and roseate bliss hung heaviest over the offices of the Atlanta Baseball & Amusement Co., where Rell J. Spiller, business manager of the Crackers, and his co-officials were carolling over two nice bits of news. Viz:

1. The Columbus "club-without-a-country" finished its game of "puss in a corner" with the announcement from Charlotte that directors of the South Atlanta league, meeting there, had elected the Georgia city to membership.

HEARN DUE SOON.

2. Bunny Hearn, midget southpaw hurler, returned a signed contract and accompanied it with word that he would leave his Brooklyn home next Tuesday and would reach Atlanta shortly thereafter to open training for the season.

The dispatch from Charlotte clears up what had been regarded, and justly, as a major problem by Cracker heads and baseball men throughout Dixie and the nation. With the Southeastern league already out of action, the south was faced by the total loss of Class B baseball. The action has saved the league for another season and has boosted the caliber of play in it.

The franchise at Columbus is Cracker property. The players at Columbus likewise. And with roster limitations what they are, it had looked for some time as though the Crackers were about to be forced to dispose of valuable material through lack of a spot in which to place it.

PLANS DROPPED.

The collapse of the Southeastern league had moved Spiller to propose the formation of a new league in this section. Plans for that formation had met with some degree of success, but Spiller said Friday that he would probably drop them now, since the Sally looks to a great season.

Sally directors opined at their meeting that the move to take in Columbus had virtually saved the loop, one of the oldest in the minors. Columbia, S. C., dropped from the list some time ago, and it was the Comers' berth which was awarded to Columbus.

The Augusta franchise, which is also in doubt, may be retained by the Wolves. Sally directors gave Augusta a stay until February 26 (next Thursday) to settle matters there. Should no satisfactory arrangement be forthcoming, the Augusta berth will be given to either Selma, Ala., or Montgomery, Ala., both of which have applied for membership in the Sally.

SECOND REASON.

W. G. Bramham, president of the Sally, said he was "not interested" in Spiller's proposal to organize the new league. He had been invited to accept the presidency of the proposed circuit. His statement, made at the Sally meeting and repeated in a communication to Spiller, was another reason for the dropping of plans by the Cracker official.

In any case, Columbus is now settled firmly in the Sally league and may expect a good season. No manager has yet been named for the club, nor has a definite squad been lined up, but plans are being pushed along both lines.

Cracker affairs are also moving rapidly at the club offices. The arrival of Hearn's contract boosted the player list to 15 and supplied a name which is expected to be valuable this season. The crook-armed mite joined the Crackers in midseason last year and did right well in the four games he pitched. He reported himself in good shape and counting on a great year in Cracker uniform. He is expected to be a mainstay of the Cracker mound staff.

GOLF TITLE WON BY HELEN HICKS

Girl To Attend Baseball School

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 20.—(AP)—When Norman "Kid" Elberfeld, noted diamond ex-manager and player, opens his third annual two-week baseball school in Atlanta Monday, one of the student will be a feminine pitcher. So far as is known here Jack Mitchell, who won eight games and lost three for the Engelettes in the Chattanooga Girls' Baseball league last year, will be the first girl ever to attend a baseball school.

Elberfeld, who has been drilling her the past week, stated that he taught her to throw a curve ball in five minutes. She is a southpaw and is 17 years of age.

FULTON AND LEE ARE DEFEATED IN SEMI-FINALS

By Roy White.

Commercial and Decatur High will renew their athletic war contests tonight at 8:30 o'clock on the Decatur court when they meet in the finals of the first North Georgia Interscholastic Conference basketball tournament. A preliminary girls game will be played at 7:30 o'clock.

Commercial defeated the favored R. E. Lee quintet of Thomaston, 21 to 20, for its third straight upset of the tourney in the feature game Friday night and Decatur after a ragged start in the first quarter, rallied to beat Fulton, 35 to 19, to enter the finals with the Typists.

Both semi-final games Friday night were among the best of the tourney and were full of fast and furious action, with the Typists-Fulton game claiming honors.

Commercial played its best game of the week to beat the Thomaston team. The Typists forged into the lead near the end of the first period and were leading 18 to 14 at the intermission.

In the second half, Lee played a much better game but could not overcome the Commercial lead. Berger, Bellamy and Arnold played well for the winners, while Treadaway with 14 points was outstanding for the losers.

Decatur Wins Over Fulton Five.

Completely outplayed in the first quarter, Decatur High rallied near the close of the second and continued a consistent game in the second half to beat Fulton, 35 to 19.

Fulton, with Moore and Roberts leading the way, gave Decatur plenty of trouble in the first quarter but the DeKalb county team rallied to take a 16-15 lead, as the half ended.

In the second half, Decatur displayed an unusually good passing attack and made several "crip" shots to give them an advantage that was not threatened.

Not only was the Decatur offense working to perfection but the defense was good enough to prevent Fulton from scoring but one field goal in the last half. Anderson, Murdock and Flynt played well for the winners.

SEWANEE BEATS V. P. I.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Feb. 20.—(AP)—University of the South came through with a smashing attack in the second half here tonight to defeat V. P. I.'s quintet, 34 to 27. After matching the Tennesseeans stride for stride in the opening half, the Gobblers slumped badly after intermission.

THE SPORTLIGHT

By Grantland Rice

Tales of a Wayside Tee.

THE average golfer may know that wrist action is important—that it is almost impossible to swing without some give or bend or breaking of the wrists at the top of the swing. He may know this and believe it is true, and yet there are two important reasons why so few have any wrist action to speak of.

The first of these reasons is the matter of tight gripping, a vise-like clenching of the hands upon the shaft which turns the wrists at once into wooden hinges that can't be worked.

The second is the deep yearning to hit or slug the ball in place of swinging the club head and this almost invariably locks the wrists at the top of the back swing. This is merely another way of stating that the average golfer blocks his road at the outset to one of the most important fundamentals and never gives it a chance to get to work.

THE best golfers will tell you that without a certain suppleness and flexibility of wrist action there can be no club head speed. If there is no club head speed there can be little power, for club head speed is the factor that develops all the power one can get into a swing. Golf would be a much easier and a much simpler game if most golfers could get this idea firmly imbedded in their heads or minds.

It would be a much simpler game if most golfers could take a two-handed grip, which left the wrists relaxed and unlocked, and if most golfers thought only in terms of swinging, as Mac Smith has so often advocated.

Yet, for some reason, they won't do it. Nothing can loosen their frenzied grip. And all the advice ever accumulated won't prevent their slugging at the ball instead of swinging at it, or through it.

The Queer Mental Side.

ONE might think that a little simple reasoning would work the problem out—or at least help work it out. One might say this as he walked to the tee: "I know, in order to give my wrists a chance, subconsciously, I must use a lighter grip and a smoother back swing and think in terms of swinging the club head. I will do this as I take my grip and address the ball."

But one rarely does. One is usually thinking of something else—of how far one can wallop that first drive—of the pits and bunkers ahead—of slicing or hooking, or something else.

So all thoughts about the lighter grip, more flexible wrists and the matter of swinging fly over the hills and far away as all the old faults return.

When To Think.

THERE has been much dispute as to whether one should consciously think of wrist action. A number of noted professionals think this must be subconscious or automatic. Yet as I recall one conversation with Bobby Jones, he remarked that among the few things he tried to think about was that matter of cocking the left wrist at the top of the swing.

It may be that he thinks of this in advance, just as he is addressing the ball. But, as he remarked that day, it is something one can easily overlook or forget if one depends entirely upon automatic action.

Something might be asked concerning the matter of wrist action at the start of the back swing. Here, certainly, there should be no attempt to break the wrists on the getaway. If this happens one is almost sure to lift the club without any body turn. The hands and arms take the club back with the wrists remaining neutral, neither locked nor taking any active part.

It is only when one is approaching the top of the swing that the wrists begin to function. The bending or cocking of the left wrist at the top puts one in position to get some power without calling on a body lunge to help out. If the wrists are not brought into position at the top, one has the feeling that power must be supplied from some other source and the only other source available is the body. So around comes the right side at the start of the down swing and everything is ruined.

"I don't believe one should ever think about the wrists," a well-known golfer said a short while ago. But if one isn't using the wrists in the right way, if one is locking them all through the swing, how is anyone to correct a serious fault without thinking about it? It may be fatal in the course of a round to put too much attention on the action of the wrists. But this action has to be given consideration at all times if one is afflicted with the common fault of wrist-locking. And one of the first moves to make is to loosen the grip and get the feel of flexible wrists.

It was largely for this reason that the "waggle" was first worked out. It is through the "waggle" that one unlocks the wrists and gets them back into play. However, one goes about it, it is impossible to hit a golf ball correctly with wooden or iron wrists blocking the entire swing and turning it into a body lunge.

TOURNEY PLANS TO BE FINISHED

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 20.—Basketball moguls of the Southern conference will gather here Saturday to pair the teams selected for the conference tournament in Atlanta February 27-March 3, and to complete plans for the tournament.

Teams seeking a place in the tournament had until 6 o'clock this afternoon to send their entries to Coach Herman J. Stegeman, chairman of the committee on arrangements of the tournament, who will preside at the meeting.

Teams selected for the tournament will be paired tomorrow and announcements of the pairings will be made immediately after the meeting. Complete details of the tournament will also be announced.

Sixteen teams will be elected from 18 of the leading quintets in the conference for the annual tournament.

The teams selected are: Maryland, Georgia, Kentucky, V. M. I., Virginia, Washington and Lee, Duke, North Carolina State, North Carolina, Georgia Tech, Alabama, Auburn, Florida, Louisiana State, Vanderbilt, Tennessee, Sewanee and Clemson.

Four of the teams were selected unanimously because of their fine playing during the conference season just passed. Four teams are Georgia, Alabama, Kentucky and Maryland.

Cadet Basketeers Defeat Industrial

Rallying in the last minutes of play, the Cadets of Georgia Military Academy took a 41-to-26 decision from the basketeers of Columbus Industrial High on the G. M. A. court last night.

With the score tied, 19 to 19, in the middle of the last quarter, Gantt, Cadet forward, began ringing the basket to send G. M. A. away to a safe margin.

G. M. A. held a 14-to-11 advantage at half time.

HACK REPORTS IN FINE SHAPE FOR BIG SEASON

By Paul Mickelson,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Hack Wilson, the "little giant" of the Cubs, who dethroned the mighty Babe Ruth as home run king last year, came back to Chicago today bristling with ambition for another bumper season with his big war club but as reticent with his predictions as a stage struck rookie.

As the pudgy Cub outfielder alighted from the train, he was peppered with a veritable barrage of questions by newspapermen who teased him to make a prediction for 1931. He merely replied:

"Can't say how many home runs I'm going to make. All I can truthfully say is that I will be in there swinging as hard or harder than ever. Say, what time does that train leave for Catalina Island tomorrow?"

Wilson looked the picture of condition and health and admitted that while he was "five or six pounds" overweight that he never felt better.

"Played a lot of basketball this winter with the firemen's team down in my hometown, Martinsburg, W. Va.," Hack said, "and did I get training playing that game? I'll say I did."

"I have examined the new ball closely," he said, "but I can't see much difference. In fact, I had to be told which was the new and which was the old. The heavier stitching may help a flock of pitchers and maybe it won't."

One matter concerned Hack and that was a report that Hornsby planned to shift him from center to left field, placing Kiki Cuyler in the center garden.

"I've played center field almost all of my baseball life," Hack reflected, "and naturally would like to be left there. But what Hornsby orders is okeh with me. He's the boss and he's after the best combination possible."

Wilson rejoined his old teammates, Cuyler, Riggs Stephenson and Cliff Heathcote. They, together with the rest of the infielders and outfielders, will make up the Cub second squad and head for Catalina Island tomorrow, just one week behind the advance squad of batterymen.

Cub Batterymen In Hard Drill.

AVALON, Cal., Feb. 20.—(AP)—In spite of a fine crop of protesting bones and muscles among Chicago Cub batterymen, Manager Rogers Hornsby ordered another full sized workout for today.

Owner William Wrigley, Jr., watched practice for the first time, having remained away from Tuesday's workout, which was largely devoted to accomodating photographers.

Senator Pitchers Ordered To Report

BILOXI, Miss., Feb. 20.—(AP)—Because of the revised early spring training schedule of the Washington Senators which calls for the opening exhibition game with Baltimore March 12, President Clark Griffith, expects five pitchers to arrive in camp tomorrow. He sent telegrams ordering an advance guard of hurlers to get in shape for the early exhibition games.

The five members ordered to report February 21, are Irving Hadley, Robert Burk and Charles Fischer from last year; Walter Tauscher, obtained in a draft from Dallas, of the Texas league, and Lyn Griffith, who struckout 245 batters for Joplin in the Western association last season.

GIRLS' TOURNEY REACHES FINALS

CHAMBLEE, Ga., Feb. 20.—Decatur and Chamblee entered the finals of the fifth district girls' basketball tournament with victories tonight over Clarkston and Fairburn, respectively. The championship game between Decatur and Chamblee will be played Monday night, and Clarkston and Fairburn will play a preliminary.

Decatur High, after ragged playing in the first half when only three points were scored, came back strong in the second half to beat Clarkston, 10 to 5. The Clarkston team was held to one foul in the last period.

Petrel Gridman Hurt in Practice

Shouse was injured as he, with several other players, tangled up in an attempted tackle.

Earlier in the spring training season, which ends its eighth week Saturday, Wayne Pickard, whom Coach Robertson regarded as one of the outstanding tackle candidates to enter Oglethorpe in several seasons, was the victim of a similar injury.

Both Shouse and Pickard, outstanding performers on the freshman eleven of last fall, are regarded as varsity material and will join the squad again next fall.

One-Man Track Team Pointing for Olympics

Joe Hall, 'Gator Ace, To Forego College Competition in Long Grind.

By Dillon Graham,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Feb. 20.—(AP)—Joseph Hall, Florida's one-man track team who placed third in the national decathlon last year, already is pointing for the 1931 event and the Olympics.

Almost victorious in his first participation in the gruelling ten-event track and field show at Philadelphia, Hall plans to forego his year's college competition with the University of Florida and prepare for the decathlon in the A. A. U. meet this summer at Lincoln, Neb.

And the intensive training program he has mapped out all works toward top condition for the international Olympic all-round championship in 1932.

Hall's absence will be a real blow to the Florida track team, which, under the tutelage of Nash Higgins, the Hoosier mentor, has not lost a dual meet in three years.

Higgins spotted Hall, a tall, graceful type of athlete, boxing in intramural competition early in his sophomore year. Hall had played some basketball and baseball in high school but knew nothing of other sports.

He became a star almost overnight. In his first track season he was fourth among Florida's point-scorers and a handy man in any event. And the next fall he took his first shot at football. The opening game found him starting at end.

KEY MAN.

And last year he was the key man of the track team and a fine wingman on the grid squad. Together with a couple of other Florida men, he bumped along to Philadelphia in a dilapidated car and, unheralded, won the high hurdles, took second in the high jump and the shot put and finished high enough in the other events to rank third at the close.

"I do not plan to compete in intercollegiate track this season, but to work on form. I hope to enter the decathon in the A. A. U. meet at Lincoln, Neb., this summer," he says. "Next year I want to engage in football and track, using the latter as training for the decathlon of the Olympics. This is only an ambition; I may not be able to make the team."

Joe receives his bachelor's degree in June, but will come back for additional study and athletic participation. He's also an average performer in basketball, baseball and boxing.

BULLDOGS SET FOR SCRIMMAGE THIS AFTERNOON

Long Session To Climax Third Week of Practice at Georgia.

By Al Smith.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 20.—Slightly recovered from the effects of the "flu" epidemic, the Georgia Bulldogs were given a light workout this afternoon as Head Coach Harry Mehre prepared them for the climax of their third week of spring training tomorrow. The climax will be a two-hour scrimmage, the fourth of the year.

Six members of the Bulldog squad are temporarily "on the shelf" as a result of flu. Jodie Whire, Jim Hamrick, Buster Mott, Buddy McCrimmon, John Eckoff and Lewie Batchellor are stranded on the sidelines. Whire, Mott and Hamrick have light attacks, while McCrimmon and Eckoff are just recovering from the effects of being bedridden a couple of weeks. Batchellor is in the university infirmary.

Other ailing members of the Bulldogs' squad were out for their regular Thursday afternoon scrimmage yesterday, but were kept from doing anything more than light work. Several members of the squad were excused from practice today to keep them from too much exertion.

Saturday's scrimmage will end the third week of work. Next week they begin scrimmaging defensively against plays of their future opponents.

DICKERSON SET TO REFEREE GO

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 20.—(AP)—"Pa" Stribling, promoter of the Johnny Risko-Mickey Walker fight here next Tuesday, announced today that Ed Dickerson, Grand Rapids, Mich., had been selected to referee the bout.

Dickerson was mutually agreed upon by Danny Dunn, Risko's manager, and Jack Kearns, Walker's manager, and the elder Stribling, to be third man in the ring.

Riverside Heads Plan Great, New Stadium

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Feb. 20.—A stadium with a seating capacity perhaps unequaled by any similar school in the country will be erected on the athletic field of Riverside Military academy, to be completed in time for the 1931 season, it was announced by Colonel Sandy Beaver, president of the academy.

Addition of more than 100 acres to Riverside athletic plant through the purchase by President Beaver of the property of the Chattahoochee Golf Club was said to give the school one of the largest properties of its kind in the south. The school property now covers 250 acres.

Colonel Beaver stated today that he had employed Burke and Stevens, Atlanta architects, to convert the club house into a suburban home in which he and his family will live.

BY JOHN L. COOLEY.

Buying of the utility, chemical and, in the last hour, the motor issues hid a good deal of selling in stocks that lacked strong sponsorship, but profit-taking by traders leaving for an extended week-end holiday was a minor influence. The turn-over, 3,800,000 shares, was the largest of the week with the exception of Tuesday when the market sold off.

Aside from United States Steel which turned heavy after touching the new high of 149, industrials did moderately well. Coppers, oils and rails lacked color and so did most of the specialties, although Auburn soared 10. Allied Chemical's net gain of 9 1-2, representing all but a point of its maximum rise, stood out. National Distillers advanced 4 net, Du Pont 8, Davison Chemical 2 3-4 and United Carbon and Mathieson about 1 1-2.

A late spurt in American Telephone lifted it to 197 3-4, a new 1931 top, up 3 1-4, but International Telephone was the feature of the utility group, holding most of a 3-point rise. A 2-point jump in Radio, together with a smaller advance in Columbia Graphophone, revived reports that Radio was seeking to acquire Columbia through the latter's British subsidiary, H. M. V. Gramophone.

The motor stocks easily rolled upward in the late trading. A 3-point gain in Nash exceded the rallies in shares of other manufacturers, but Hupp, General Motors and Mack Trucks closed 1 to 1 1-2 higher. Hudson's response to the dividend cut was a 2-point advance, much of which was retained.

Bonds were very dull. July wheat nearly touched 71 cents and then lost its strength, closing nominally lower. Final corn quotations were off 1-4 to 1 cent. Realizing made cotton reactionary and it lost 90 cents to $1.10 a bale net.

The most cheerful bit of news was the report that the volume of building contracts in the first half of February had turned upward, the daily average for that time being about $2,500,000 above the January figure. Maintenance of the present rate of increase through this month would mean a better than seasonal gain.

Exchanges of the Spanish-speaking nations displayed uniform strength, especially the peseta which again rallied sharply.

ATLANTA SPOT COTTON.

Atlanta spot cotton closed steady, 20 points down to 10.30; receipts 288; shipments 251; stocks 151,343.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(AP)—The reactionary sentiment which developed in cotton here following yesterday's early advance, became more pronounced during today's trading.

It was stimulated, apparently, by relatively easy Liverpool cables as well as by the extent of recent advances and reports of a somewhat less active demand from the trade. A little more southern selling was reported as well as realizing on the decline which sent the price of May contracts off to 11.20 or about 19 points net lower and 32 points below the high level of Thursday morning. May closed at 11.21 with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 18 to 22 points.

The opening was steady 5 to 7 points lower in response to the easier showing of Liverpool. The initial offerings were quite readily absorbed by some further trade buying and a scattering demand which was probably promoted by continued favorable reports from the cotton goods markets. Near months recovered all but a point or two of the opening decline while later deliveries sold back within 3 or 4 points of yesterday's closing quotations. The demand from the trade seemed to be less active than recently, however, while there was a little more southern selling and a disposition to take profits on long cotton was probably increased by the approach of the holiday next Monday. There was also considerable March liquidation probably in anticipation of notices on Tuesday that delivery sold off to 10.92 while October declined to 11.72 in the late trading and closing prices were within a point or two of the lowest.

There was some narrowing of the differences between March and late months during the day with March closing 100 points under December compared with 102 points at the close of the previous day.

Liverpool cables attributed the decline there to hedge selling and general liquidation but said the British home trade in cotton cloths was improving with a fair turnover in yarns. Reports from Worth Street said it was expected that sales of print cloths would reach a large total again this week. Exports today 9,293 making 4,867,194 so far this season. Port receipts 54,091. U. S. port stocks 4,025,010.

NEW ORLEANS SPOTS DECLINE 15-18 POINTS.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Although the cotton market was fairly active today, prices developed a reactionary trend. This was due to a decided falling off in the trade demand, rather poor cables, selling to force a reaction and somewhat bearish weekly statistics.

Owing to lower cables than due prices eased off 7 points in the early trading but soon recovered practically all of the loss on some week-end covering. As the morning advanced, prices turned reactionary and eased off under selling pressure, until losses from the highs of 14 to 16 points were shown. Mill takings and the visible supply comparisons were bearish, which helped the decline. In the early afternoon the market was quieter and a to a shade steadier, with prices still near the lows. The market developed considerable activity in the late trading due to reported active selling from Florida in New York which led to much liquidation locally. Prices made new lows 19 points under the highs and closed steady a shade above the lowest at net declines for the day of 15 to 18 points.

Liverpool came in 6 to 7 penny points worse than due. Private cables stated there was hedge selling and liquidation with poor off take. Manchester cabled that the home trade was improving in cloth and there was a fair turnover in yarns. First trades showed losses of 3 to 7 points and all the active months were soon 7 points down, with May at 11.31 and October at 11.84.

The market later recovered practically all the early loss on some week-end covering but soon turned easier again owing to a falling off in trade buying, long liquidation and unfavorable weekly statistics. May traded down to 11.23 and October to 11.75, or 14 to 16 points below the early highs and about as much below the previous close.

The market became quite active in the final half hour of trading and prices made new lows 19 points below the highs owing to active selling in the northern market which caused considerable liquidation locally. The close was a shade above the lowest, with May closing at 11.21, down 18 points net for the day, and October at 11.75, down 6 points.

Brokers' Views

LIVINGSTON & CO.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Realizing slowed up the advance in the leaders in the afternoon and the general appearance of the market took on a more speculative tone. Certain more or less neglected groups were thrust into the limelight. Oils and coppers were moved up probably for no better reason than that the going was becoming a little more difficult elsewhere. Of the standard leaders, the can stocks continue to give the best performance and there is every reason why they should. Improvement in the steels is rather irregular.

FENNER & BEANE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Constructive activities were resumed on a broader front in today's session. Issues that have lagged behind the advance continued to come in for attention while pivotal stocks surged upward into new high territory.

Considerable confidence was evidently generated by the outcome of yesterday's session wherein the list broke through the top of its previously established trading range. This action was taken to indicate that a consolidation of the advance had been accomplished by the recent irregular sidewise movement.

DOBBS & CO.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—The Dow-Jones industrial bettered the Thursday performance today and advanced into new high ground for the year. We regard it as significant that 28 out of the 30 industrials used in this compilation showed gains for the day and that 19 out of the 28 showed advances of a full point or more. This indicates that the advance has gained a momentum which should logically carry the stock market somewhat higher before a corrective movement develops. The only disappointing development was the failure of the rail averages to follow the lead of the industrials. Out of 20 rails used in the Dow-Jones rail averages, only four showed advances while six were lower and 10 were unchanged. A strict adherence to the Dow theory implies that railroad stocks must catch up with the industrials if a broad advance into new high territory is in prospect. We still lean to the view that it is advisable to take profits on long commitments at present levels.

COURTS & CO.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—The decisive break through 186 in the industrial averages, which appeared to be a logical expectation yesterday, actually materialized. At the high prices of the day the industrials reached 189.55. The closing level was 188.22, up 3.76 for the day. The utilities also closed at a new high for the year, up 73 cents to 69.16. The rails continued relatively inconspicuous, the averages showing a 9 cent decline.

Accompanying the advance into new high territory, volume of trading increased to 3,800,000 shares, more than a million shares greater than the volume of the preceding two days.

BEER & CO.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—The promise of buying interest at the opening which was given last night's vigorous close was made good this morning with heavy trading and a tape running almost five minutes behind during the first half hour. A large number of stocks opened well above their highs of yesterday and although a natural trading reaction came in during the morning it failed to depress prices to any extent and the general tone was strong all day. Some of the best advances were in stocks which have been holding back up to the present time, such as Allied Chemical, Air Reduction and some of the oils. The recent quietness in Auburn was interrupted by a sweeping gain late in the afternoon which raised this issue close to its former high.

Cotton Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Cotton developed an easier tendency today due to a combination of liquidation in March, and profit-taking in other months and considerable selling for the short account. Trade interests continued to take a good amount of cotton but the demand from that source was not as persistent as formerly and values gave way slowly, selling about a dollar a bale lower in the late afternoon. Dry goods news was of a very optimistic character with sales in Worth street so far this week exceeding 600,000 pieces. Stocks were also strong and general business favorable.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Cotton had a moderate downward reaction today with many regarded as overdue. Cables were lower and trade demand less urgent. No news of importance. The fact that late months have been selling over 12 cents has no doubt had a deterrent effect on the recent rising tendency of prices because of its possible influence on acreage curtailment. Sentiment is reactionary.

BEER & CO.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—With hedge selling, liquidation and a poor offtake at Liverpool, cables came in 5 to 7 penny points worse than due and were reflected in an opening decline in the local market of 5 to 7 points. Egyptian futures at Liverpool closed 8 to 10 English points lower. Prices continued downward during the morning with a moderate rally on trade and European buying but prices soon fell off again, mostly on realizing and some hedge selling. Secretary Hester's weekly statistics were bearish, showing only 188,000 bales taken by spinners during the week, against 194,000 last week and 252,000 last year.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—The cotton market continues to display a firm tone despite the heavy March liquidation and local selling, which continued throughout the day. At no time today was there a sharp break. The close was at the low, about 15 to 20 points down.

Trade demand seems temporarily satisfied with local sentiment distinctly reactionary. It is our opinion that there is sufficient buying beneath the market to prevent any marked decline at present.

Liverpool futures are due tomorrow: March 5.84; May 5.94.

HIGHLIGHTS OF WALL STREET

By CHARLES W. STORM,

Editor, the News Service of Wall Street.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(NANA) While big professional shorts were shouting "The market cannot keep going up at this rate," the price trend continued upward today and many issues ran into new high ground for the movement. The speed with which the stock list advanced was at the highest rate registered for any one day since the beginning of the movement and the extent to which the general public is coming into the market was the greatest witnessed for many months, according to the heads of the biggest brokerage houses interviewed.

The speculative leaders continued to include about the same issues which have been favorites the last week. At the close of the day the bull operators were exhausted by the terrific strain under which they have been operating during the last week and some of the biggest left tonight to spend the holiday in the country in order to recuperate and get back fresh on the job on Tuesday.

SILVER STABILIZATION.

Adoption by the United States senate of the Pittman resolution, suggesting that President Hoover call an international conference to effect stabilization of world silver values, occurred at the close of the market and is considered one of the most important steps taken by the administration. Creation of a plan for the stabilization of the metal will undoubtedly take place and should result in a material betterment in the demand for American goods from those countries which utilize silver as a standard for their currencies.

HISCOE LEADER.

R. V. Hiscoe, who in the big bull market was one of the most spectacular operators in the leading stocks, is again on the bull side with both feet. He was extremely active in Radio Corporation stock today, which has always been a favorite with him. Radio Corporation stock was active and higher and dealings in it were on a heavy scale.

AMUSEMENT STOCKS.

Amusement stocks were again brought forward in a substantial and impressive manner. Radio-Keith-Orpheum rose to new top prices due to the activities of the same speculative group which has always been sponsoring the issue and which is at this time heavily lined up on the bull side of the market. Warner Brothers Pictures was also a favorite during the greater part of the session, but substantial selling came into the issue in the late trading. The name of William C. Durant was mentioned in connection with the gyrations of Loew's stock.

STEEL AND BYERS.

A. M. Byers stock attracted much attention because of its activity and strength, accompanied by rumors that interests identified with subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation were buying the former issue. These reports were garbled and in some instances circulated to read that Byers would be merged with the Steel Corporation. This, of course, was denied so that selling immediately began to appear in Byers which caused a falling off from the best prices.

Rumors were also current that negotiations were under way looking to a merger of the Republic Iron & Steel and the Bethlehem Steel and that Republic Iron & Steel common would go into the consolidation at $40 a share and the Republic preferred at $80 a share.

A big and broader market occurred in the market for bank stocks and dealers reported that the prices were "running wild." Guaranty Trust had a big advance as did National City bank and Manufacturers' Trust. Dealers were caught short of bank stocks in many instances.

BY JOHN P. BOUGHAN.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Grain prices fell back sharply today from upturns that revealed an all-around overbought condition. All markets ran against enlarged selling, whereas general demand dwindled. Unfavorable weather conditions in Argentina and the North American spring wheat belt failed to uphold values in the face of extra auspicious reports about the United States winter crop, together with evidence that heavy shipments of corn were on the way to Chicago from other big centers.

Wheat closed irregular at 1-4 cent decline to 1-8 cent advance, corn 1-2 to 1 cent down, oats 1-4 cent off to 1-8 cent up, and provisions showing 2 to 10 cents gain. Continued European purchases of wheat future deliveries at Winnipeg were reported, with rains hampering Argentine exports and with Argentine exchange rates higher. Besides Buenos Aires wheat quotations showed 2 1-2 cents a bushel jump, making the competitive position of North American wheat better. Confidence of wheat buyers largely disappeared, however, after prices had risen to above 70 cents for new crop Chicago deliveries. Gains were virtually cancelled.

BY DONALD C. BOLLES.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(AP)—The bond market held steady today as the volume of business slumped to the lowest level of the year.

A little activity in convertible issues, the natural sequence to the bullish trend of shares, and strength of several European bonds offered about the only relief from the dullest session since the first week in January. The day's transfers amounted to only $8,100,000.

Domestic investment issues appeared to be marking time, and moved in a narrow, irregular groove. A few high-grade rails and utilities advanced fractionally to the best levels of the year but there was a noticeable lack of enthusiasm on the part of buyers and many issues that have been moving forward closed at prices slightly lower. Interest in United States governments was only nominal and turnover was the smallest of the week. Prices were lower, Liberty 3 1-2s and Treasury 4s sagging 1-8 and Treasury 3 3-8s dipping 3-8s.

The inquiry for some of the standard foreign government bonds picked up. There was a large demand for Italian 7s and they reached a new year's peak. British 5 1-2s sold at a new high at 107 and closed at 106 3-4 for a net advance of 1-2.

SPINNING INDUSTRY PRODUCTION GAINS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—The cotton spinning industry was reported by the census bureau today to have been operated during January at 80.8 per cent capacity on a single shift basis, compared with 76.1 per cent in December and 100.3 per cent in January last year.

Spinning spindles in place January 31 totaled 33,345,152, of which 25,611,458 were active at some time during the month, with the average number operated during the month being 26,935,485 compared with 33,567,102, 25,525,820 and 25,539,058 for December and 34,630,866, 29,198,134, and 34,733,046 for January last year.

Active spindle hours for January totaled 6,359,871,952 or an average of 191 hours per spindle in place, compared with 5,516,378,249 and 176 in December and 8,173,380,372 and 236 in January last year.

MICHIGAN STEEL PLANT TO RESUME OPERATIONS

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Operations at the Monroe (Mich.) plant of the Newton Steel Company will be resumed "not later than March 1," officials of the company said here today.

John H. Fitch, Jr., vice president, said "We don't know just yet how extensive the operations will be but we plan to resume operations of part of the hot mills and the finishing mills."

The plant has been closed for nearly eight months.

PRICES ON CURB CONTINUE HIGHER

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER.

While the advance was rather selective, a fairly wide assortment of utilities, industrial specialties and oils moved briskly forward. Transactions aggregated 591,000 shares, or about 200,000 more than yesterday's.

Electric Bond and Share was once more in the lead, advancing 2 1-2 points in active trading. American and Foreign Power warrants gained nearly 2, and American Superpower, Middle West and United Light A closed fractionally higher.

Domestic oils appeared to be influenced by the prospect of a tariff or restriction on imports. Humble bounced up 4. Vacuum and Gulf closed about a point higher.

Cord Corporation and Stutz each gained a point in sympathy with motors on the big board. In the electrical group, Crocker Wheeler was again a feature, gaining more than 2.

BRASS PRODUCTS PRICES RAISED

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(AP)—The American Brass Company has advanced prices 1-4 of a cent a pound on all products except copper tubes.

The advance followed a rise of a quarter of a cent a pound in copper yesterday and brings the prices in line with the 10 1-4-cent level for copper in the domestic market.

Total sales Friday $8,100,000; previous day $9,900,000; week ago $9,900,000; year ago $8,583,000; two years ago, holiday; January 1 to date $416,090,000; same year ago $368,821,000; same two years ago $395,186,000.

Sugar, Coffee, Rice.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Raw sugar was unchanged today, with demand chiefly from operators in shipment duty frees. Spot prices were quoted at 3.30, with sales of 28,000 bags of Porto Rican to a refiner at this price, while some 125,000 bags of Philippines for March to July shipment sold at 3.39 up to 3.47 to operators.

Price changes in raw futures were narrow, with trading again comprised chiefly of March liquidation or of exchanging from that delivery to later positions. Final quotations were net unchanged to 1 point higher. There were reports that the single selling agency may be revived again in Cuba to handle the sales of the present crop in an effort to stabilize prices. Approximate sales were 52,400 tons, including over half in the form of exchanges. March closed 1.20; May 1.30; July 1.38; September 1.46; December 1.54; January 1.56.

Refined was unchanged at 4.50 for fine granulated, with demand still light and of a hand-to-mouth character.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—An opening decline in response to easier Brazilian exchange was followed by rallies in coffee futures on covering. No. 7 contracts opened unchanged to 6 lower and closed net 7 lower to 8 higher. Sales 18,000. Santos contracts opened 1 to 4 lower and closed 1 to 3 higher. Sales 15,000. Closing quotations: No. 7 contracts: March 5.27; May 5.30; July 5.30; September 5.39; December 5.40. Santos: March 8.17; May 8.14; July 8.12; September 8.12; December 8.12.

RICE.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 20.—Rough rice nominal. Sales none. Receipts 1,071. Clean rice quiet. Sales none. Receipts 3,880.

CHASE PLANS CHANGE IN NEW ORLEANS BANK

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(AP)—New York banking interests, represented by Chase National, Hayden, Stone & Co. and Harris, Forbes & Co., which have become identified with the Canal Bank & Trust Company, of New Orleans, plan to make "certain changes" in the capitalization of the southern bank, it was said here today.

Details of the changes will be announced later, according to a statement by Hayden-Stone. The plan includes an additional issue of the bank's capital stock, exceeding $3,000,000, to be sold through a syndicate headed by Hayden, Stone & Co. New shares will be offered to present stockholders at $25. Whether the plan involves a reorganization of the bank was not announced.

For several years he was a vice president of the First National Bank of St. Louis, and has long been familiar with the economic and banking requirements of the south.

OLD GOLDS SHOW LARGE INCREASE

The P. Lorillard Company profit of over 500 per cent, registered during the depression year, is largely due, according to Lorillard officials, to greatly increased sales of their leading brand, Old Gold cigarets. The company reports that Old Gold sales showed an increase each successive month throughout 1930.

This gain was accompanied by a $3,000,000 increase in surplus, and $6,000,000 in cash on hand. Inventories were reduced by $4,000,000, and there was a million and a quarter reduction in bonded indebtedness. Lorillard officials attribute the increasing popularity of their cigaret to the continuous and large scale use of newspaper advertising.

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE No. 12

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

REX MAXON
G-12
©1931, by Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc. All rights reserved.

The noonday silence lay upon the jungle. Only the insects buzzed about. Suddenly there came a great scampering through the trees. Manu and his brothers trooped chattering through the middle terrace, shrieking: "The Mangani—the Mangani come!" "Go and call to them," urged Tarzan. "Tell them that one of their people lie here, helpless. Tell them to hasten and release me."

"We are afraid," chattered all the younger monkeys. "I will go," announced an old grey-beard, "the Mangani cannot catch me." Presently Tarzan heard the deep gutturals of his own people, the great apes. "Perhaps,' he thought, "there will be those among them who know me. It is my only hope." He lay there listening, knowing that even now fierce eyes were watching him.

There was great danger, too, that the huge anthropoids might quietly withdraw without showing themselves, suspecting a trick or a trap. So Tarzan called aloud, saying he was defenseless, a friend, needing food and water. After a moment's pause, a shaggy ape lumbered into the clearing. Swinging along with knuckles to the ground, the brute came close to Tarzan.

"M'Walat!" exclaimed the ape-man, "whose band is this?" "Toyat is king," replied M'Walat. "Then do not tell them it is I," whispered Tarzan, "until you have freed me. Toyat hates me. He would kill me if he could. Here, bite these bonds in two." Tarzan raised his bound wrists. "You are my friend," replied the ape. "M'Walat will do as you ask!"

Three Powerful Pictures Open Local Runs Today

"MODES OF HOLLYWOOD" IS STAGE IDEA AT FOX

Perhaps the most gorgeously staged and gowned "idea" that Fanchon and Marco have yet created comes to the Fox on the new bill that opens there today. It is called "Modes of Hollywood," and, in addition to the usual group of clever principals and the Sunkist Beauties, presents an array of lovely models in some of the most spectacular costume effects ever created.

On the screen the Fox presents "Body and Soul," a tale of aviators and spies in wartime. The leading male role is played by Charles Farrell, while the feminine star is Elissa Landi, internationally famous actress who makes her film debut in this picture. Critics in New York have raved over her appearance and her art more completely than over any player of the past.

Enrico Leide has a special orchestral overture, Al Evans has songs he guarantees will draw singing from every member of the audience and a list of exceptionally good short screen subjects complete the bill.

FAMOUS DANCING GIRLS TO BE SEEN AT GEORGIA

In addition to one of the most powerful talking picture dramas ever conceived, and to a stronger than usual RKO vaudeville program headlined by Bomby and his Radio Gang, the Georgia theater offers, on the new program which starts this morning, the Gluck-Lander Girls. These are twelve lovely dancers, notable all over the world for the perfect precision of their routines and for the beauty of their dance conceptions.

They will give their internationally famous "Fan Illusion" and other spectacular novelties at the Georgia, interspersing their dances in three or four "spots" throughout the program.

The screen feature is "Scandal Sheet," with George Bancroft playing the finest role that has fallen to his lot yet. He is a ruthless managing editor of a daily tabloid newspaper, who will stick to his rule of publishing everything even when it ruins his own home. The unusually fine supporting cast includes Kay Francis, Clive Brook and Lucien Littlefield.

WEIRD PLAY, "DRACULA," ON SCREEN AT CAPITOL

The Capitol theater brings to the screen beginning today "Dracula," one of the most sensational talking pictures of the new season and which has been breaking house records this week at the Rialto theater, Washington. "Dracula" played a sensationally long run on the stage in New York, and was seen in Atlanta on the stage with William Tilden, the tennis star-actor, in the title role.

Tod Browning directed "Dracula" for Universal, and has turned out a masterpiece. The work of Bela Lugosi, who created the part in the stage play, and of Helen Chandler, who is cast in the part of his victim, is exceptionally good.

The A. B. Marcus company also changes the stage show Saturday, presenting "Flashes of the Great White Way," said to be even more lavish than the offering of the opening week. In the new offering Ben McAtee, Faye Hammond, Elmer Goudy, Leon Miller, Bessie Singleterry, Dorothy Goudy, the Busch Sisters and other principals, as well as the entire chorus will be seen in new costumes with new lines and surrounded by new and snappy scenery.

Seats on Sale Today For Lecture by Byrd

Seats go on sale this morning at the Cable Piano Company for the lecture to be given at the City Auditorium next Thursday night by Rear Admiral E. Byrd. The famous explorer is brought here by Agnes Scott College to tell the story of his two-year exploration trip into the antarctic when he flew over the south pole and added immeasurably to the store of world knowledge regarding that desolate region.

Admiral Byrd will speak at the Agnes Scott College auditorium in Decatur on Thursday afternoon and at the City Auditorium here that night. His lecture will be illustrated with 9,000 feet of special motion pictures, selected by the explorer himself and different from pictures already shown in the regular theaters.

Many school and college classes have already arranged to attend the Thursday night lecture in a body and others desiring to seat together are advised to make their reservations early, as the seat demand is expected to be heavy.

LOST FOR TWO MONTHS, SCHOONER RETURNS

BALTIMORE, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Two months behind schedule and once given up for lost, the four-masted schooner Purnell T. White made port today from Georgetown, S. C.

The schooner left here November 9 for Georgetown with a cargo of cement and was not heard from until early in January after she had passed through the Capes on November 23. Provisions were low when the coast guard cutter Yamacraw came to her aid and towed her into Fernandina, Fla., for repairs.

3 CHILDREN SMOTHERED IN FIRE AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Three children were smothered or burned to death and their parents and five brothers and sisters injured in a fire that trapped them on the second story of their little frame home early today.

The dead are Adeline, 10; Leonard 8, and Dorothy Havlicek, 3.

Adeline died in a hospital this morning. Her brother and sister were found dead in bed by firemen after the others had been helped through a second story window to a truck driven up to the rescue.

Prohibition Speaker Is Coming Here by Air

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Three speakers of the flying squadron foundation which is touring the United States striving to create enthusiasm in favor of the eighteenth amendment and its enforcement are now on their way to Atlanta from Los Angeles by plane, it was announced here today. One of them, Dr. Oliver W. Stewart, is to address a prohibition rally in Atlanta Sunday night. The other members of the party are Miss Norma C. Brown, clergyman and lecturer of Illinois, and Colonel Alfred L. Moudy, of Indiana. They will have headquarters at the Ansley hotel during their stay.

One stop will be made on the way, plans having been made for a rally at Dallas, Texas, tonight.

Dr. Stewart has been active in prohibition work for many years and made a record in this line by visiting 225 different cities to speak against liquor between 1915 and 1920.

'Roxy' Originated Stage Preludes To Feature Pictures Back in 1913

S. L. Rothafel, affectionately known to thousands of radio enthusiasts as "Roxy," has been the most imitated theatrical man in the country. It was his original idea of introducing the feature motion picture in his theaters with the atmospheric prelude and it was from this that the presentation idea, now so customary in all large motion picture houses, has grown.

When in 1913 Roxy undertook the management of the Strand theater in New York city, at that time the largest theater of its kind in this country, he introduced the first divertisement to precede the photoplay. Departing altogether from the idea of combining vaudeville with a motion picture he introduced a form of entertainment which chould act as a setting for the photoplay to come. Through either choral effects or the use of a ballet, he created an atmosphere which the picture later continued. When, as often was the case, the picture itself did not always measure up to the standard which Mr. Rothafel could wish, his preludes were so effective and conceived with such sincere artistry and imagination that the patron was content to overlook the deficiencies of the photoplay because of the divertisement which preceded it.

Passing from the Strand to management of the newly erected Capitol theater, Roxy continued the development of his idea until the ballets and orchestra of that theater achieved a nationwide reputation. At the Capitol theater Roxy first interested himself in broadcasting and surrounded by his company, began sending his programs out over the country from the stage of his theater. Slowly he built up a group of entertainers which he casually labeled "My Gang" and so excellent were the programs that in a few months the gang became the most famous group on the air. They occupied a distinctive place in the hearts and in the home life of the people in all parts of the country who nightly tuned in to his "Hello, everybody," which preceded the broadcasting. In March, 1927, he opened his own theater, the Roxy, one of the most magnificent structures of its kind either in this country or abroad, and from here he continues, each Sunday afternoon and Monday evening to broadcast with his Gang.

On Wednesday afternoon and evening next at the Fox theater, Roxy, assisted by Mme. Schumann-Heink, and supported by a symphony orchestra and a company of 70, which includes such internationally-known figures as Beatrice Belkin (courtesy of the Metropolitan Opera Company), Patricia Bowman, premiere dancer of the Roxy theater; Celia Branz, Marie Bowman, Daddy Jim Coombs, Adelaide De Roca, Lucille Fields, Frank Moulan, Viola Philo, Wee Willie Robyn the Roxy Male quartet, Leo Russotto, Harold Van Duzee, Harold Clyde Wright, Margaret Mickey McKee, Dorothy Miller, Isabelle Henderson, Mildred Newton, Josef Stopak and others, will appear under the auspices of Yaarab temple for the benefit of the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children, who have induced Roxy to include Atlanta on his limited tour of the country. This will be the first time that many people had had the opportunity to see in person the man and the Gang who have for so long contributed greatly to their entertainment on the radio.

ARAB PAPER CHARGES HOLY LAND SLAVERY

JERUSALEM, Feb. 20.—(AP)—The Arab newspaper Al Hayat charged today that the practice of selling young girls into virtual slavery is widespread in Palestine.

Al Hayat's story is in the form of an open letter to the high commissioner from Hassan Sidky El Dajani.

It describes a motor trip taken by Hassan Sidky. A man stopped him and said:

"I have a little girl with me. We want to go to Bireh, near Ramallah. Have you any room?"

The driver said he had room and the man brought back a young peasant child, not more than eight years old. I asked the man where he had gotten the child.

"'Her parents,' he explained, 'have let me take her for 25 years for the sum of $25. There is nothing to be surprised about, for there are persons who make worse bargains and buy girls outright—forever.'

"Another passenger said: 'It is true. Prices six months ago were much higher. I had to pay $149 for my child, to say nothing of $10 for the agent who managed the business for me. Now prices have fallen. We train these children and so do not have to hire servants.'

"I asked the man what the government had to say about such a practice and the reply was: 'Many of the government officials buy such girls themselves.'"

CANADA IMPOSES U. S. AUTO DUTY

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 20.—(UP)—Increased tariff protection against American automobiles was imposed Thursday by the Dominion of Canada, through an order in council.

The order fixes a discount of 20 per cent from list prices as the basis for determining duty, and this discount will apply through all classes of cars. In effect, it means an increase in the tariff of as much as 15 per cent. The order is to take effect immediately.

The tariff is raised by setting a basis for duty by discounts from list prices instead of on wholesale prices, as heretofore. The wholesale prices are ordinarily from 25 to 35 per cent lower than list.

ALABAMA BILL SEEKS TO BAR STINK BOMB

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 20.—(AP)—Practical jokers are to have their range cut down in Alabama—at least so far as the "stink bomb" goes.

Representative Culver, of Etowah, today introduced a bill in the house to make the possession, sale, manufacture or giving away of a "stink bomb" or a similar device a felony with punishment fixed at from one to five years in prison.

The Etowah representative said Gadsden people were particularly interested in the passage of the bill since the explosion of such a bomb had created a near panic in a theater there a few months ago.

ACTION ON MEYER NOMINATION DELAYED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Action on the nomination of Eugene Meyer to be governor of the federal reserve board was deferred again by the senate today because of the absence of Senator Brookhart, opponent of confirmation.

SCHOOLS OF DECATUR TO RECEIVE $92,500

Budget Approved by City Commission Subject to Approval at Hearing.

A total of $92,500 was voted for the use of Decatur schools during 1931 by the city commission in executive session Friday night, when the city's budget for the year, involving approximately $400,000,000, was drawn up.

Representatives of the board of education appeared before the commission and asked for $92,500 from the city, funds for the remainder of the schools' operating expenses to come from the state. The sum represents the maximum amount allowable under the city charter.

The adoption of the 1931 budget for the city, Friday night, is subject to a public meeting, which will be held March 20. Prior to this meeting the budget is to be printed in pamphlet form and distributed to the public. These pamphlets will be ready by the first of next week, stated Mayor Scott Candler.

CHURCHES TO AID RELIEF FOR POOR

City-Wide Appeal Will Be Broadcast From Pulpits Sunday.

Appeals on behalf of Atlanta's hungry, homeless and sick unemployed will be made in local churches at Sunday's services by outstanding laymen, under plans laid by the Atlanta better business commission, of which Samuel C. Dobbs is chairman.

"Atlanta's unemployment relief program has reached a crisis," said Mr. Dobbs Friday. "Hoped for improvement in the emergency situation since the first of the year has failed to materialize. On the contrary, the demands upon the emergency relief committee have steadily increased each week.

"I am asking the citizens of Atlanta to put the indigent and suffering poor on their pay rolls until the present situation is over. We have registered now at our headquarters, 85 Poplar street, 13,211 persons who are dependent upon us for food, fuel and medicine—a great many of them are sick," Mr. Dobbs said.

Weekly checks from those who can afford to give are requested by Mr. Dobbs. At least $5,000 a week is necessary to take care of the situation properly. Two thousand letters asking for contributions have been mailed by Mr. Dobbs. The letters explain, "I do not wish to draw an extreme picture, but I do not hesitate to tell you that a fire is smoldering in the community, which, while it can be quenched through prompt and adequate relief, must not be allowed to grow in its menace. Common sense as well as humanity demand that the situation be met promptly and adequately."

The unemployment relief situation cannot be thrown upon the already burdened Community Chest, as that organization is geared to do its ordinary work, and since last fall has been having to carry an increasing extra load, Mr. Dobbs said.

"The situation exists. There is no doubt of that. I do not feel that Atlanta is any worse off than other cities, but we must meet our local situation and meet it with real money," said Mr. Dobbs. "People who can ill afford to give have been sending in their checks for $5, setting a splendid example for those who can and should give freely."
